c.2

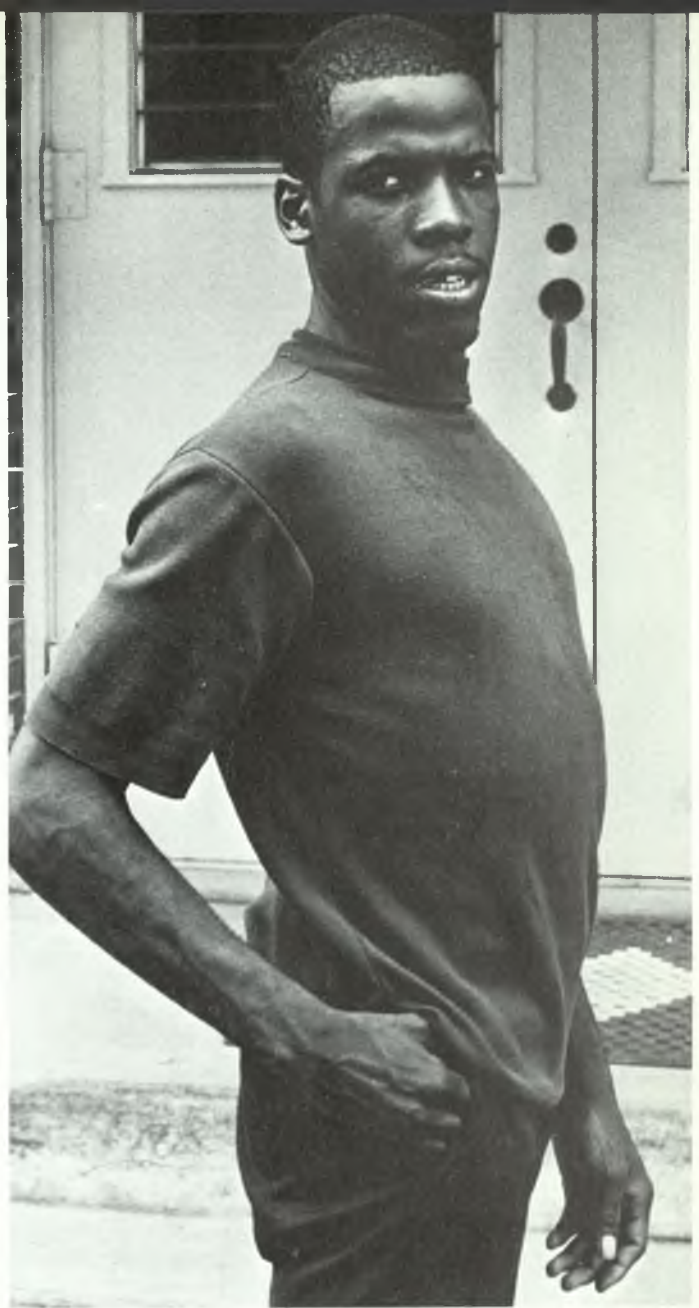

One of the first things one hears from his noble and pride-bearing elders is that college is a vacation from life. And so one is warned to make the most of life's holiday, and enjoy the inanity of ivory-tower antics. But life is made of a thousand things of which we are never free, their natures known only in paradox.

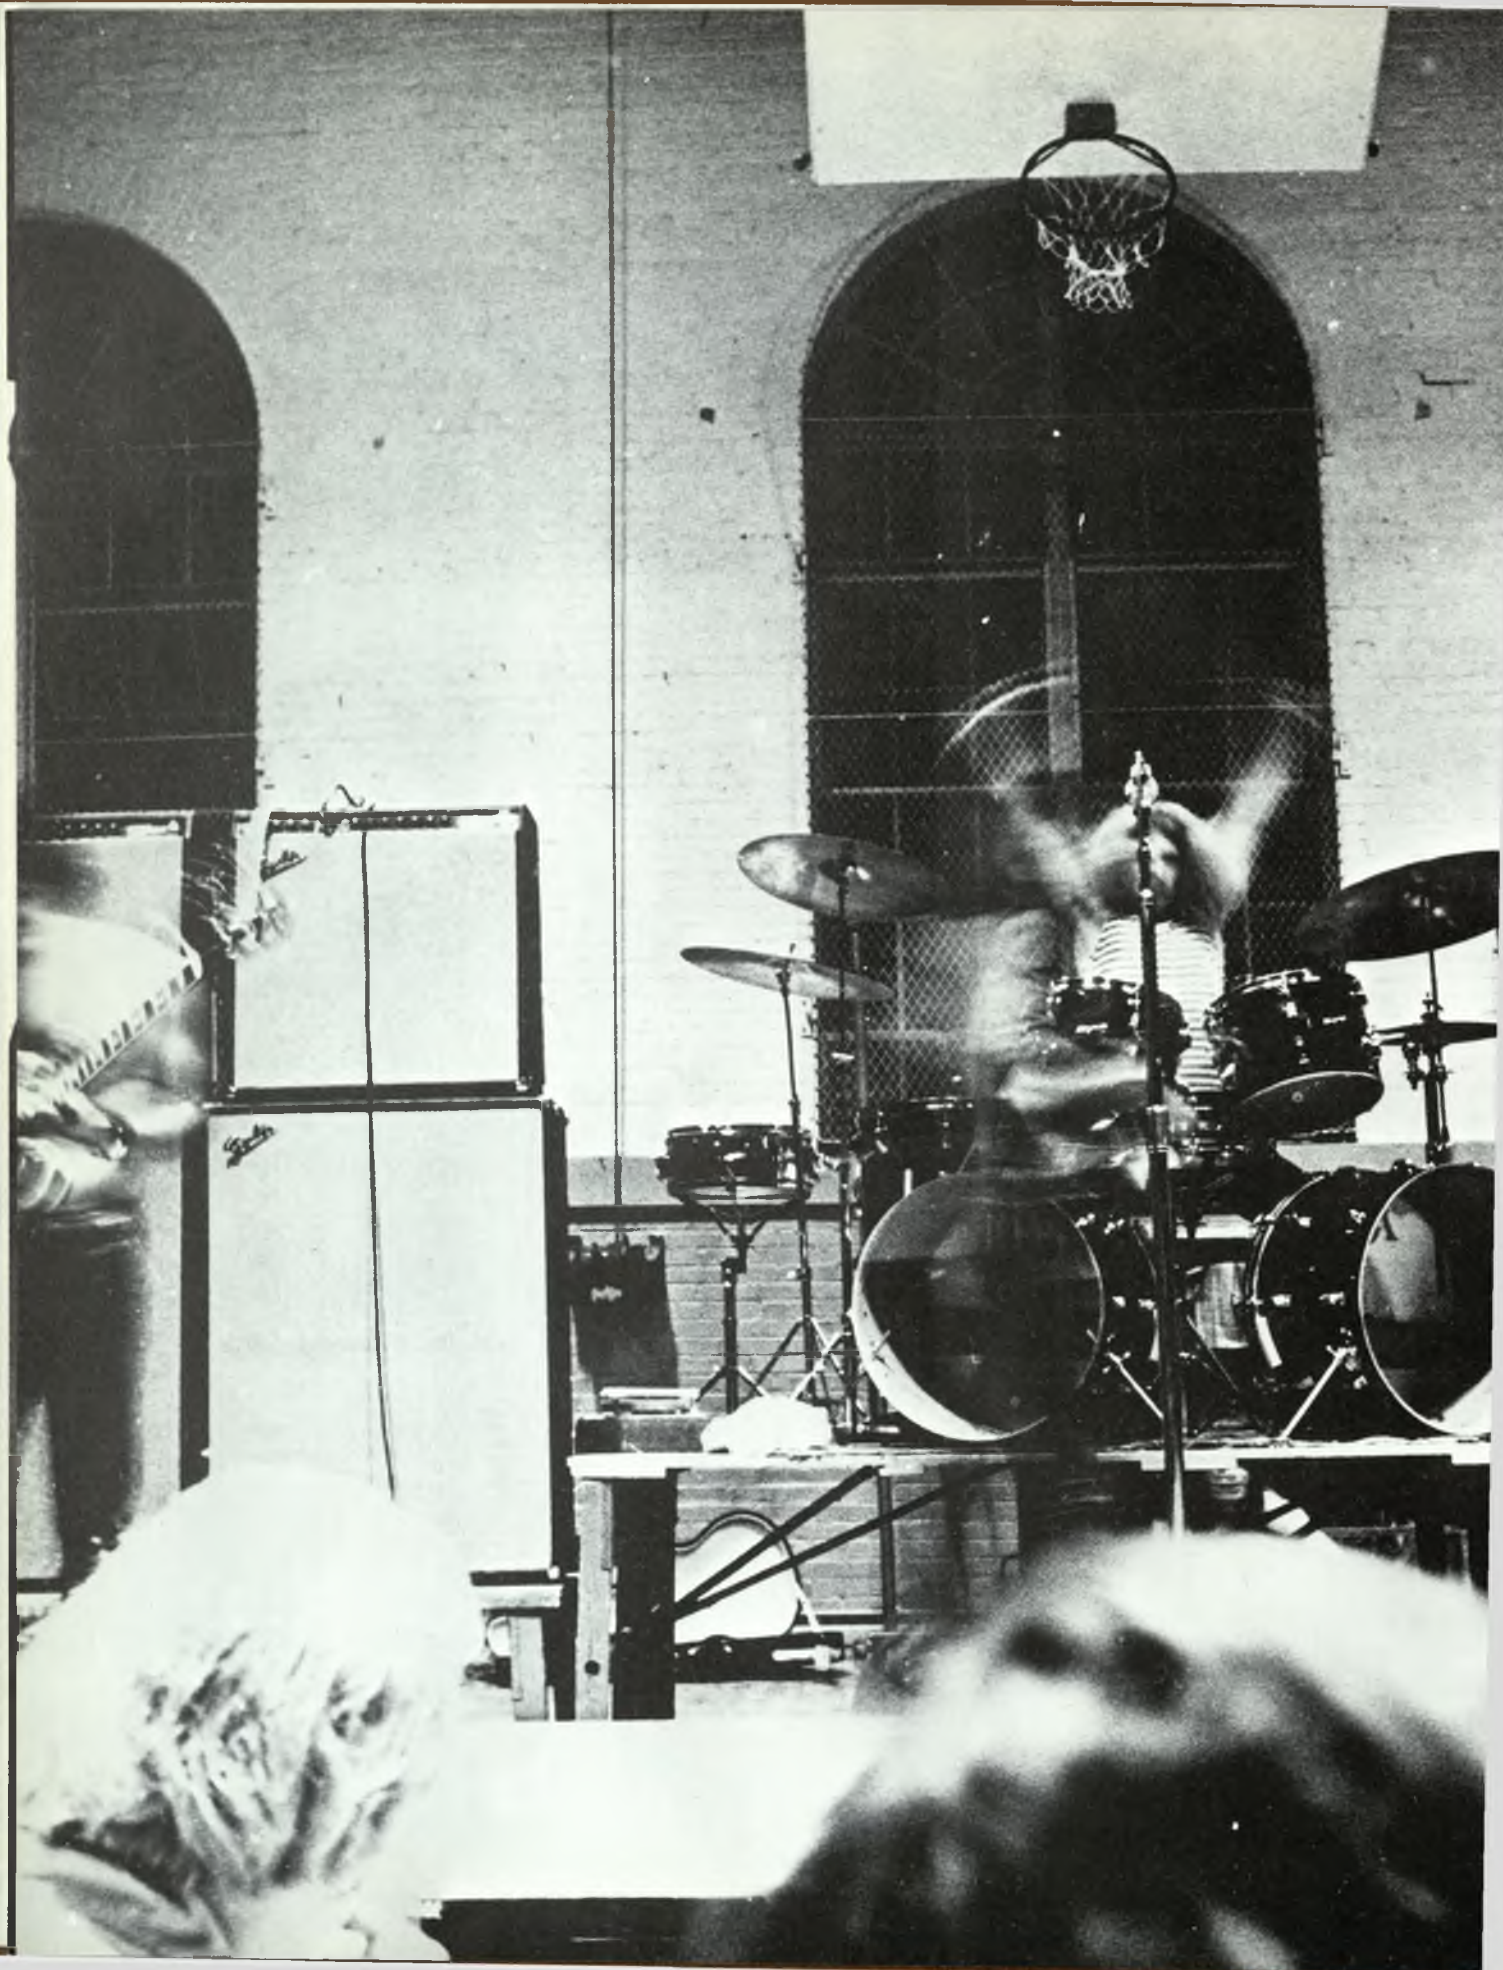

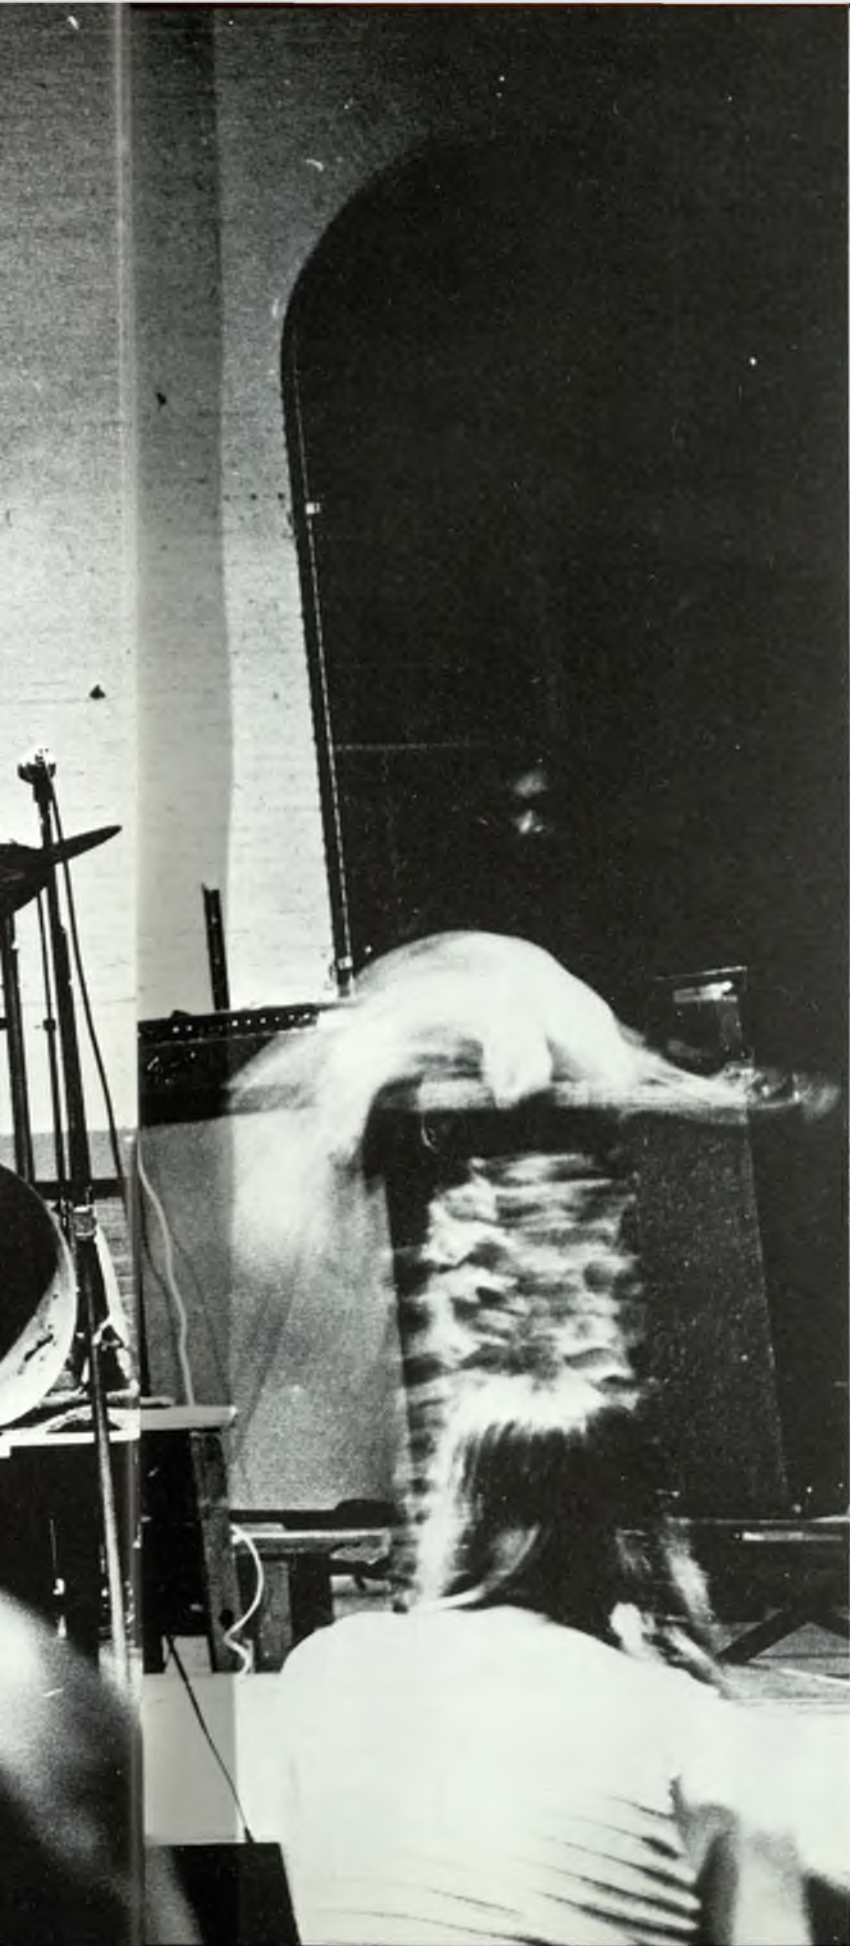

. . where extremes
can find themselves in a similar cast of eye . . .

ROCK
ROCK
ROCK
ROCK
ROCK
ROCK
ROCK

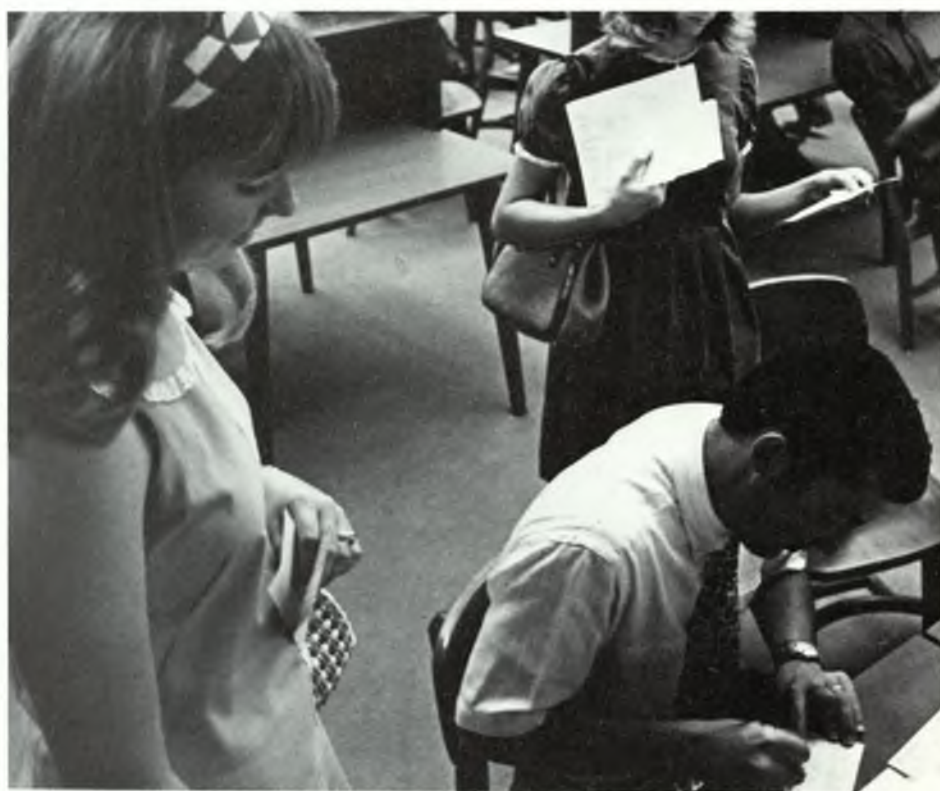

... in Power ...

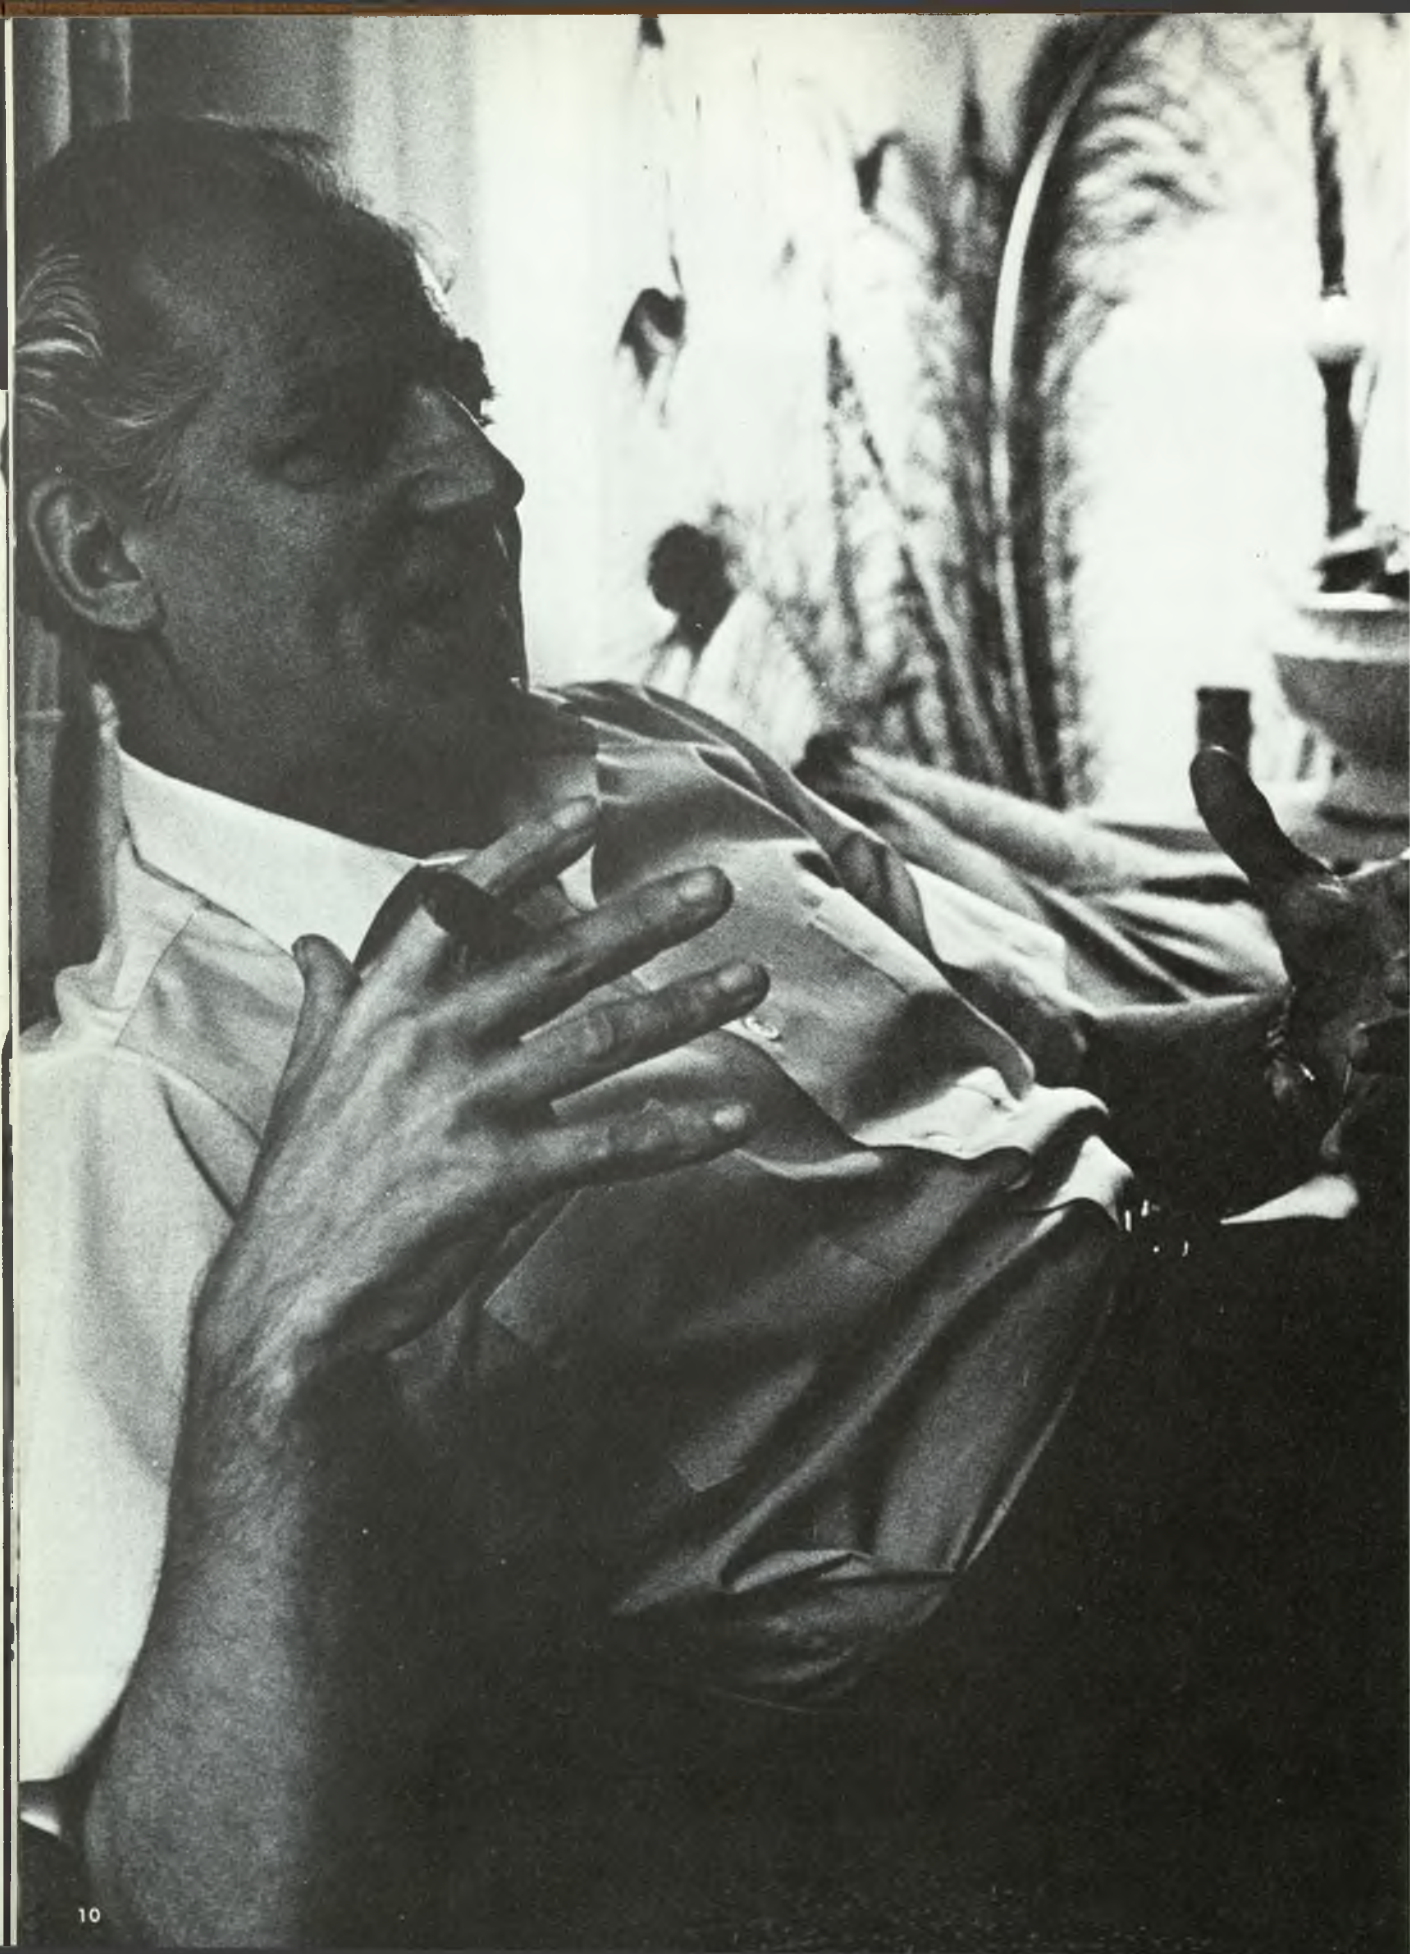

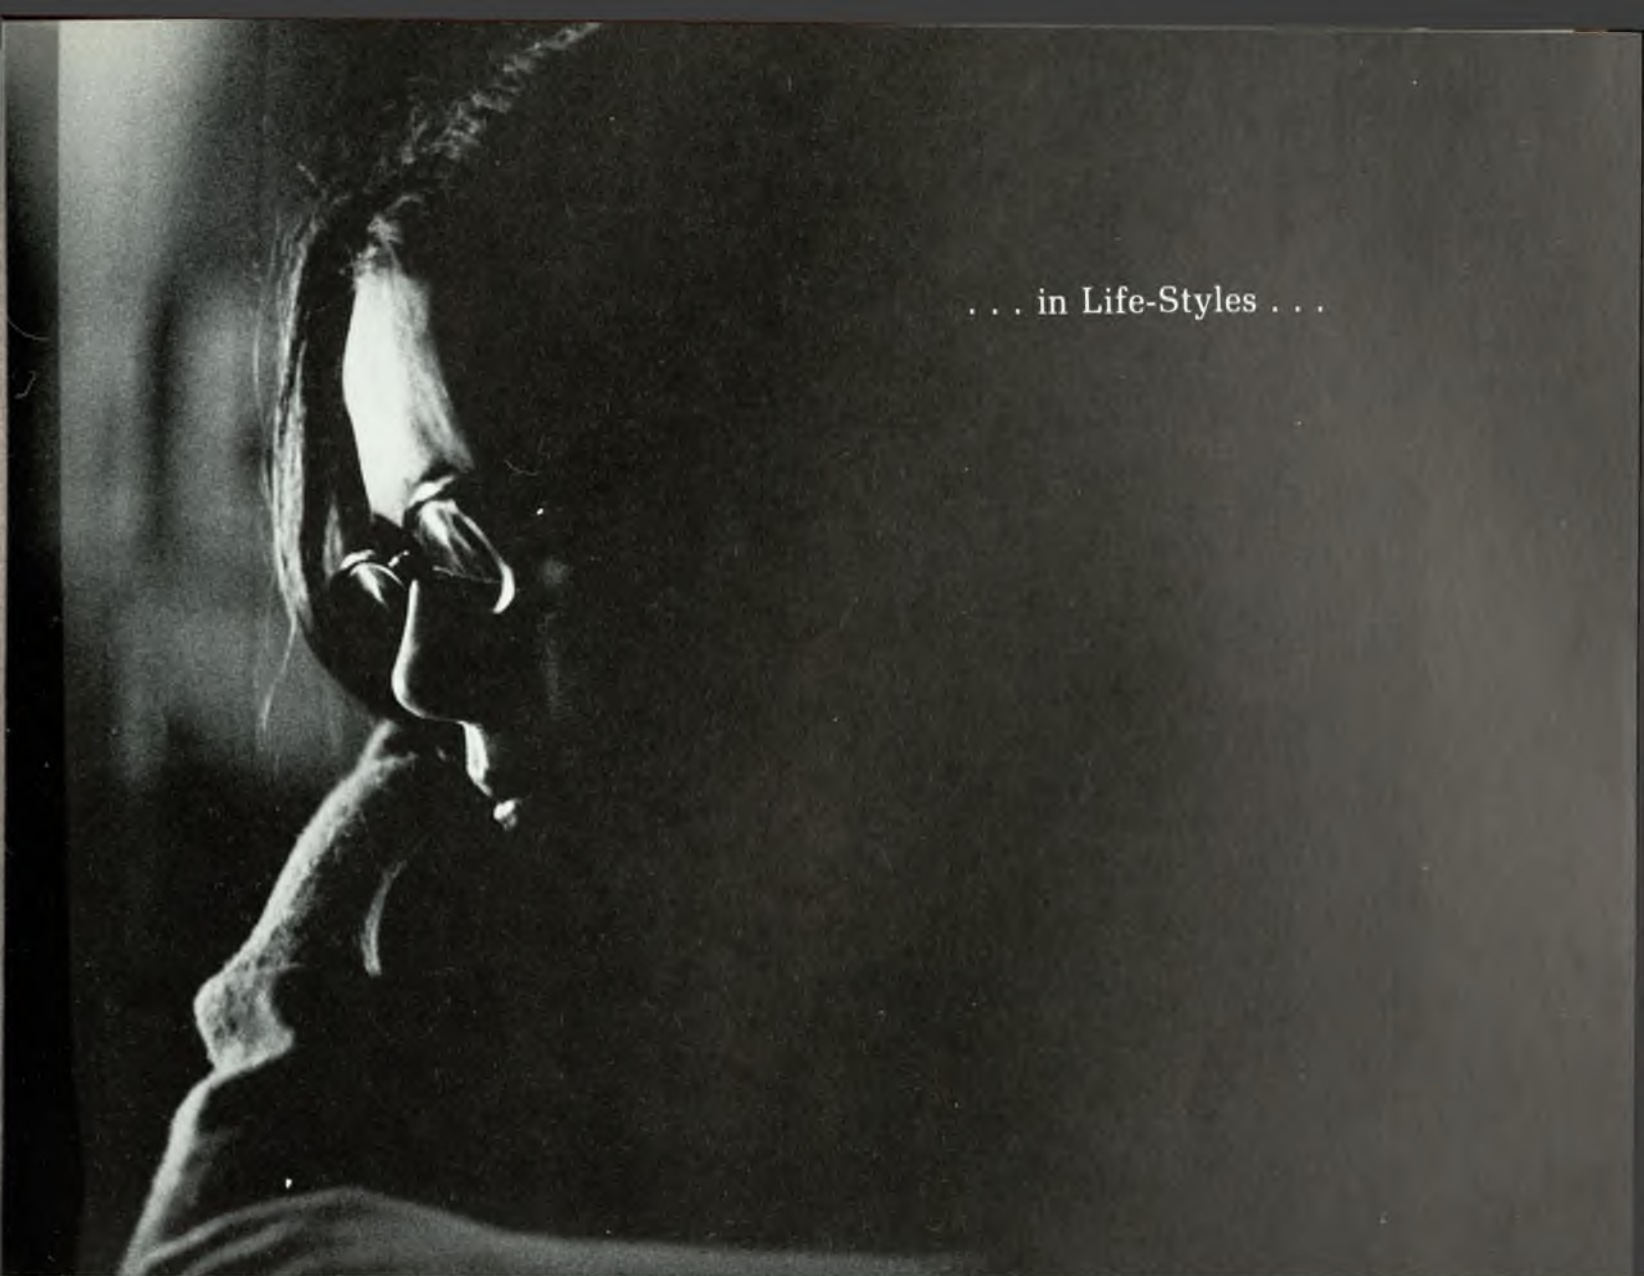

... in Words ...

... in Life-Styles ...

and the child can make the young seem old

we have our laborers . . .

... our scenery ...

... our theatrics ...

and so we stand with our faces contorted
and our nobilities on our sleeve

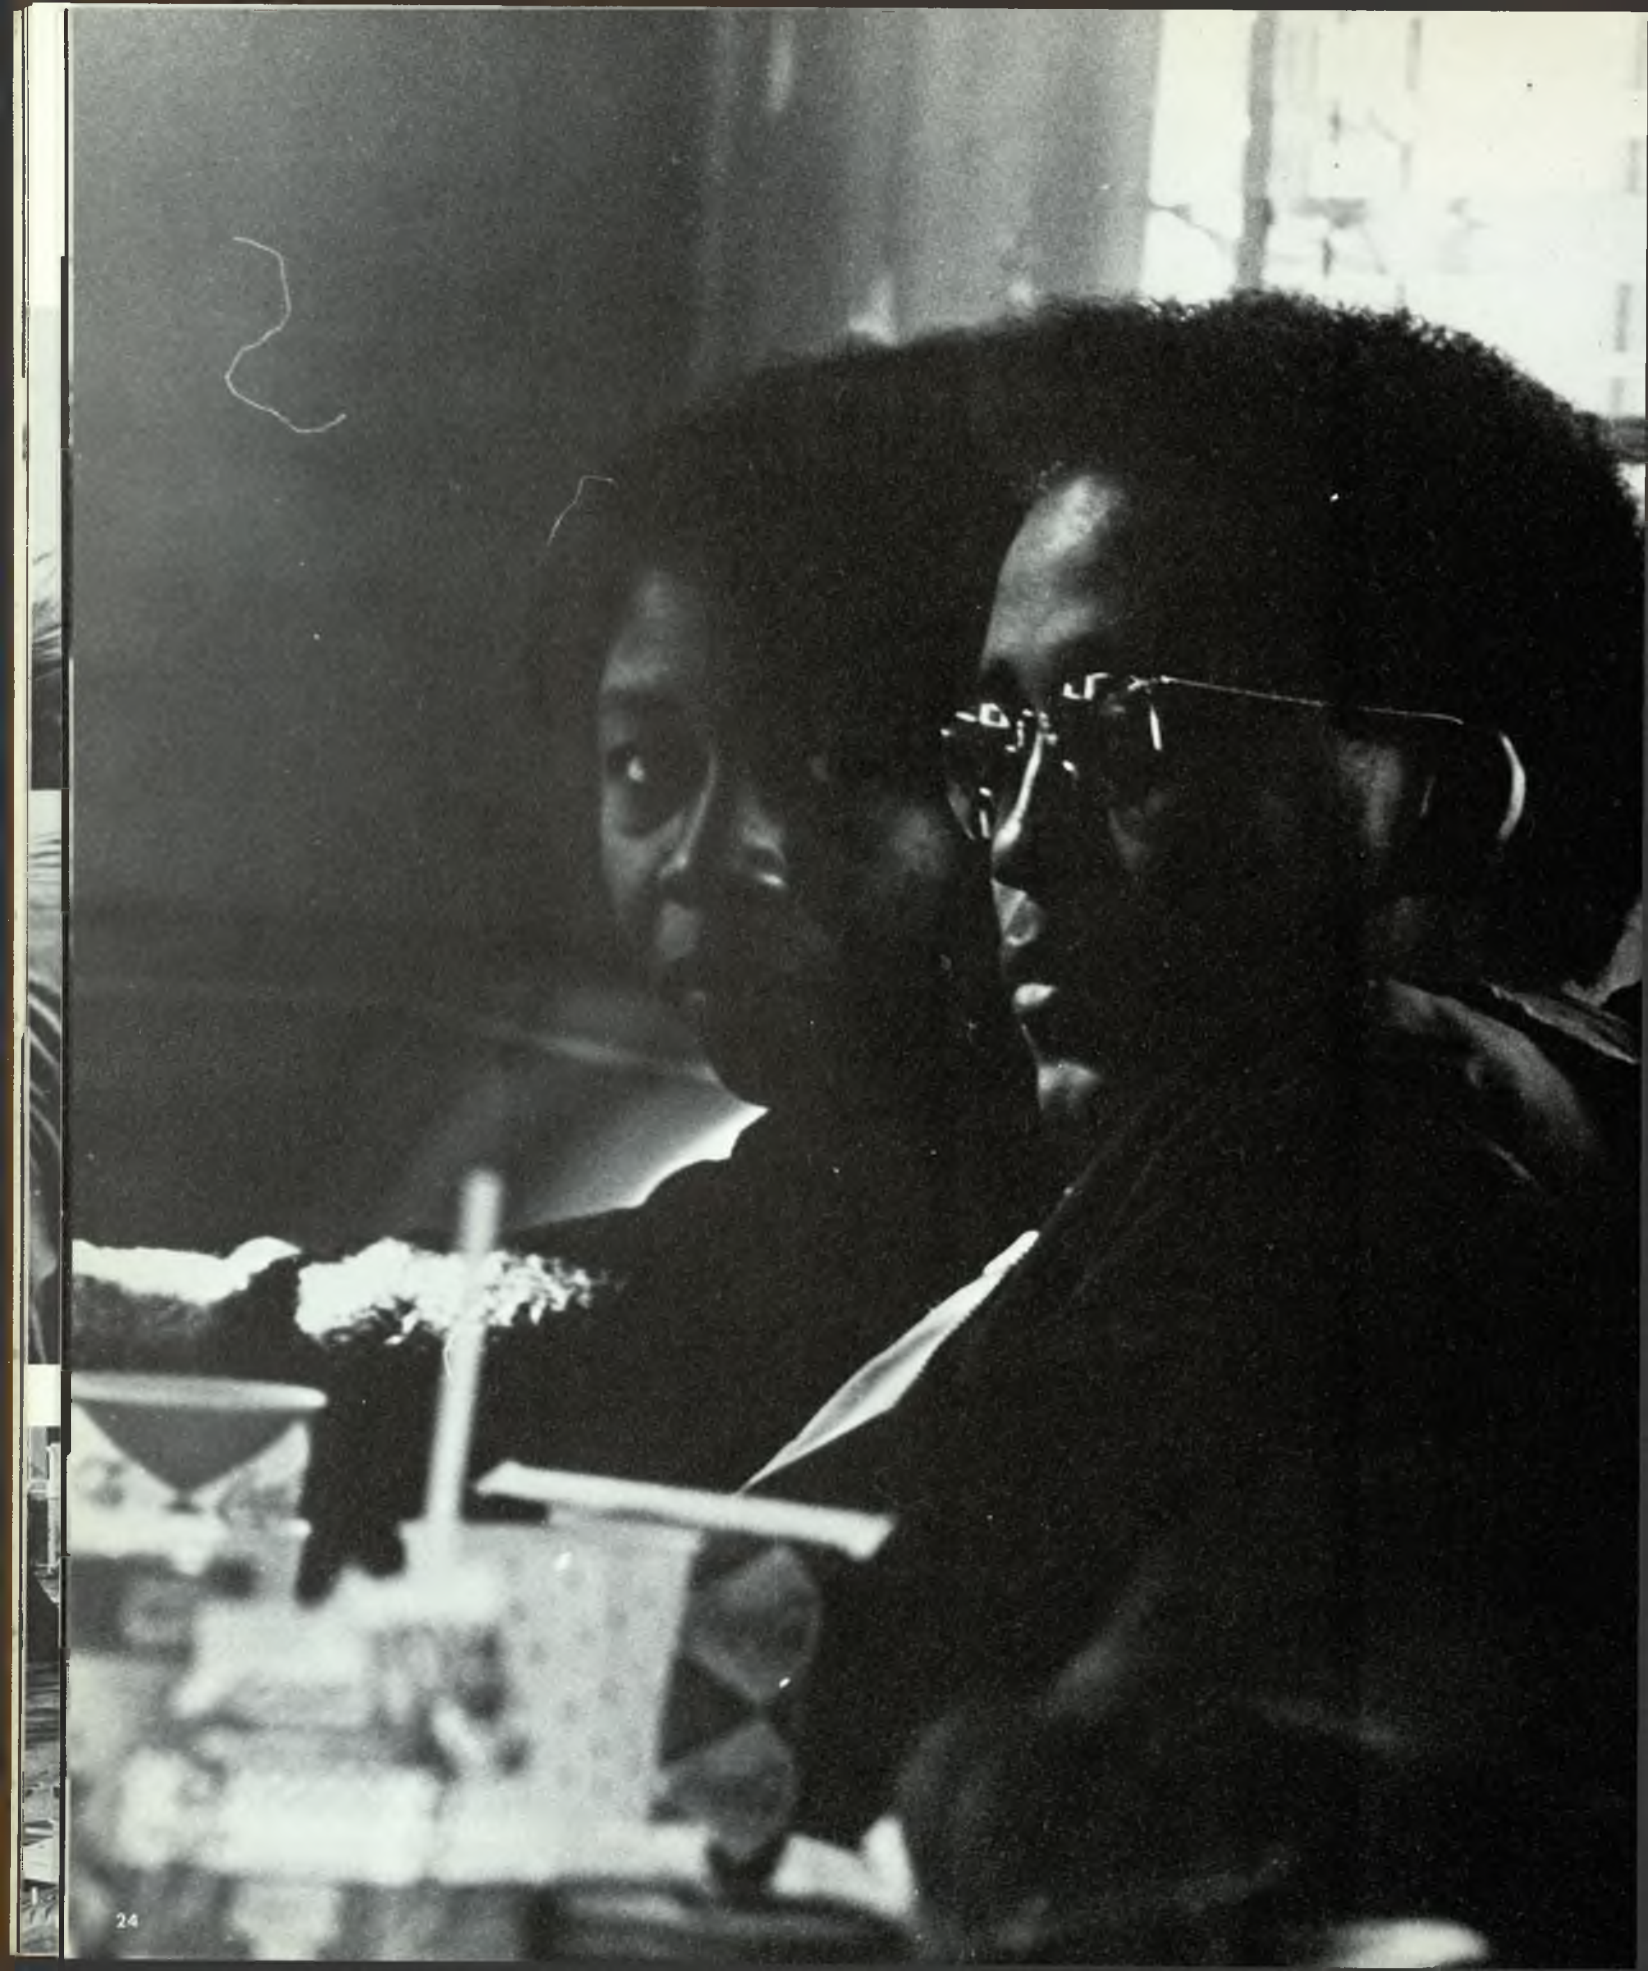

but occasionally joined in common effort . . .

we may even, someday, transcend all the games

It still seems that power
falls
in the lap of those who have chosen to endure its less glorious work.

Some of us seem to know it all,
some probably do,
and occasionally one of us
has the smiling temerity
to not even care.

This sometimes South
stares more than some of us choose to bear.

We Have Our Joys
and Our Meditations

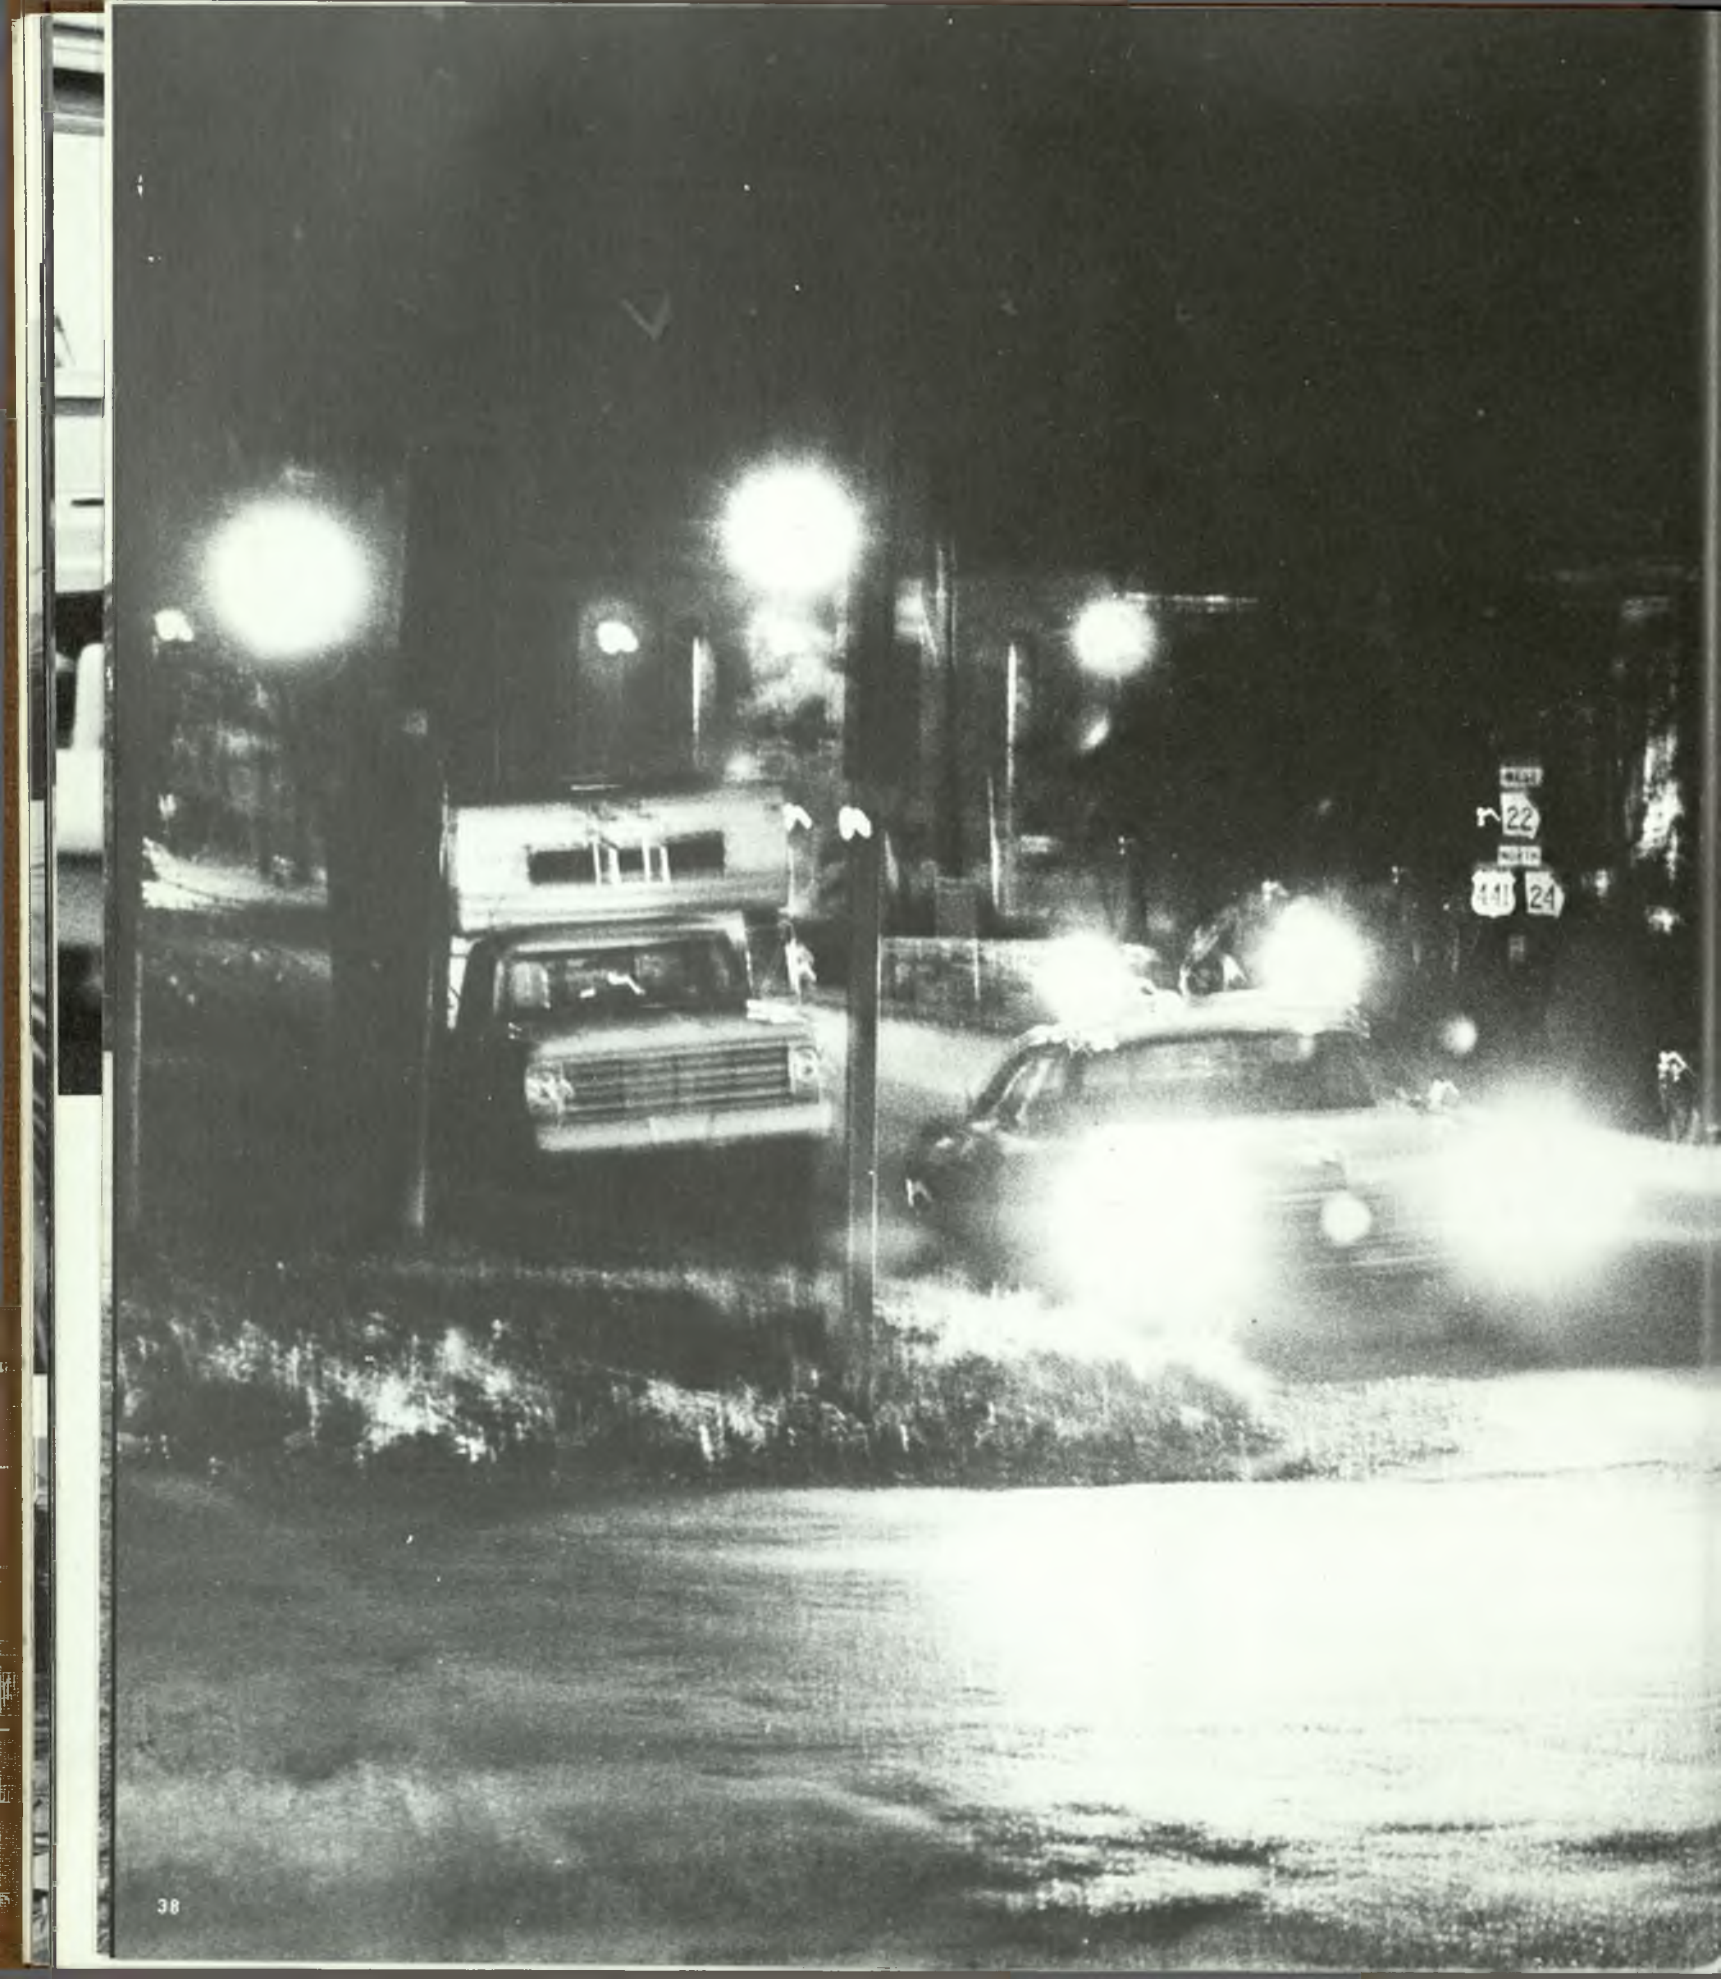

And We Dance

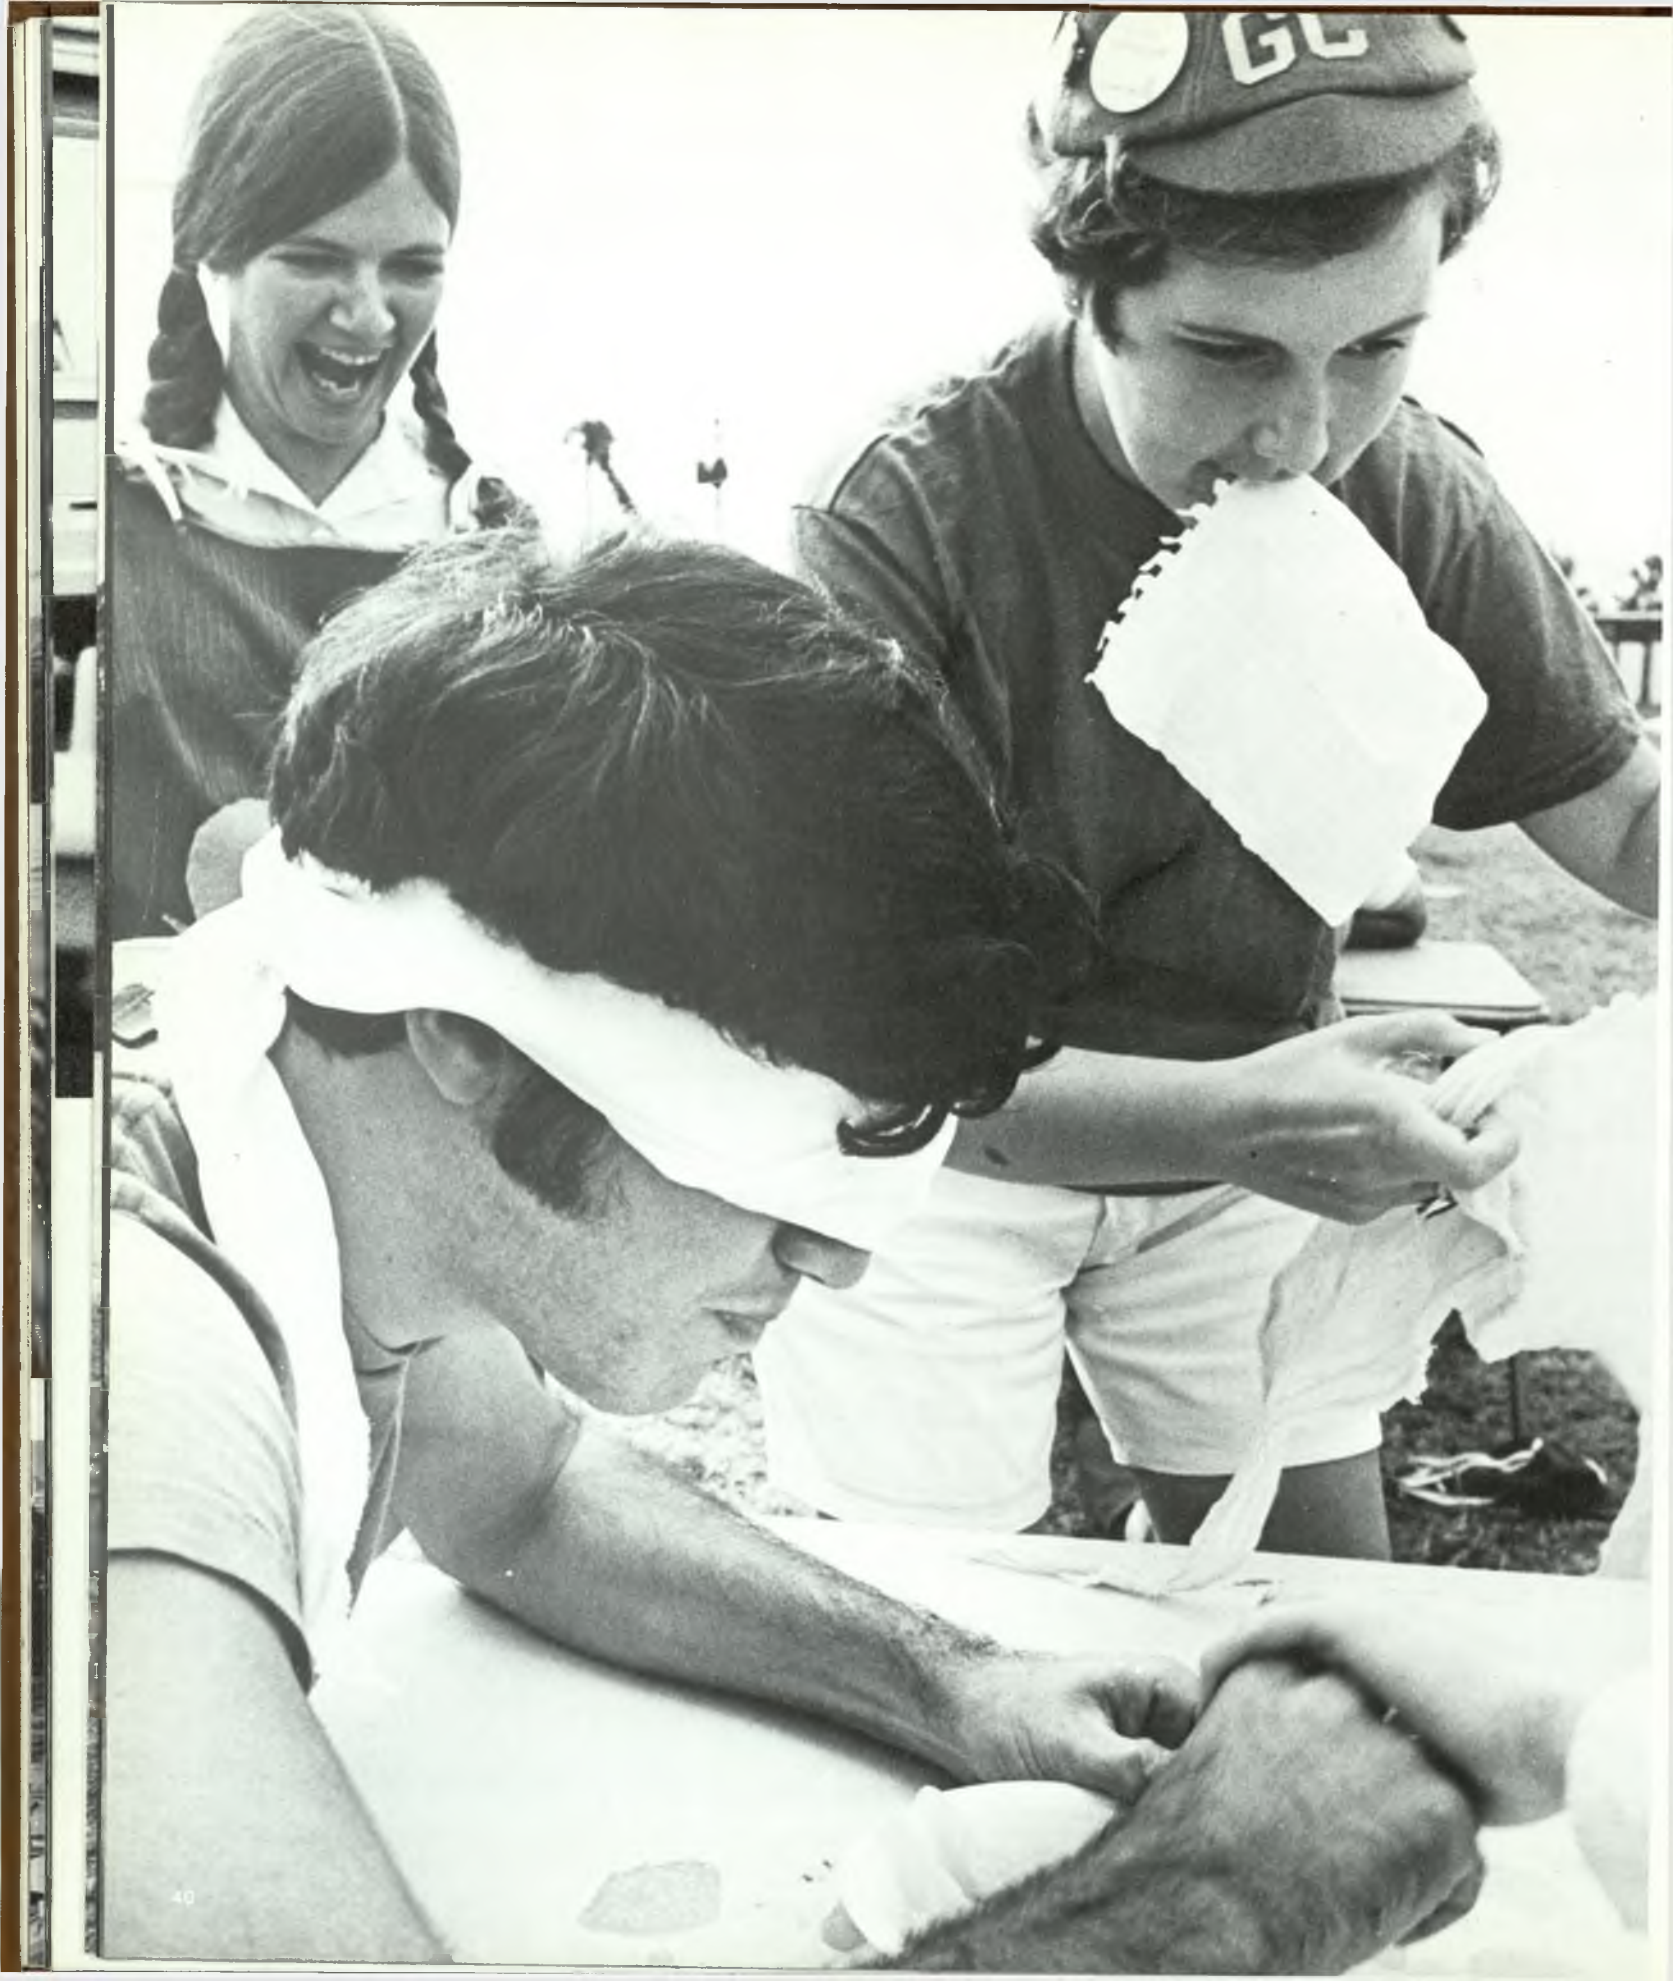

We Indulge in Many Wholesome Recreations

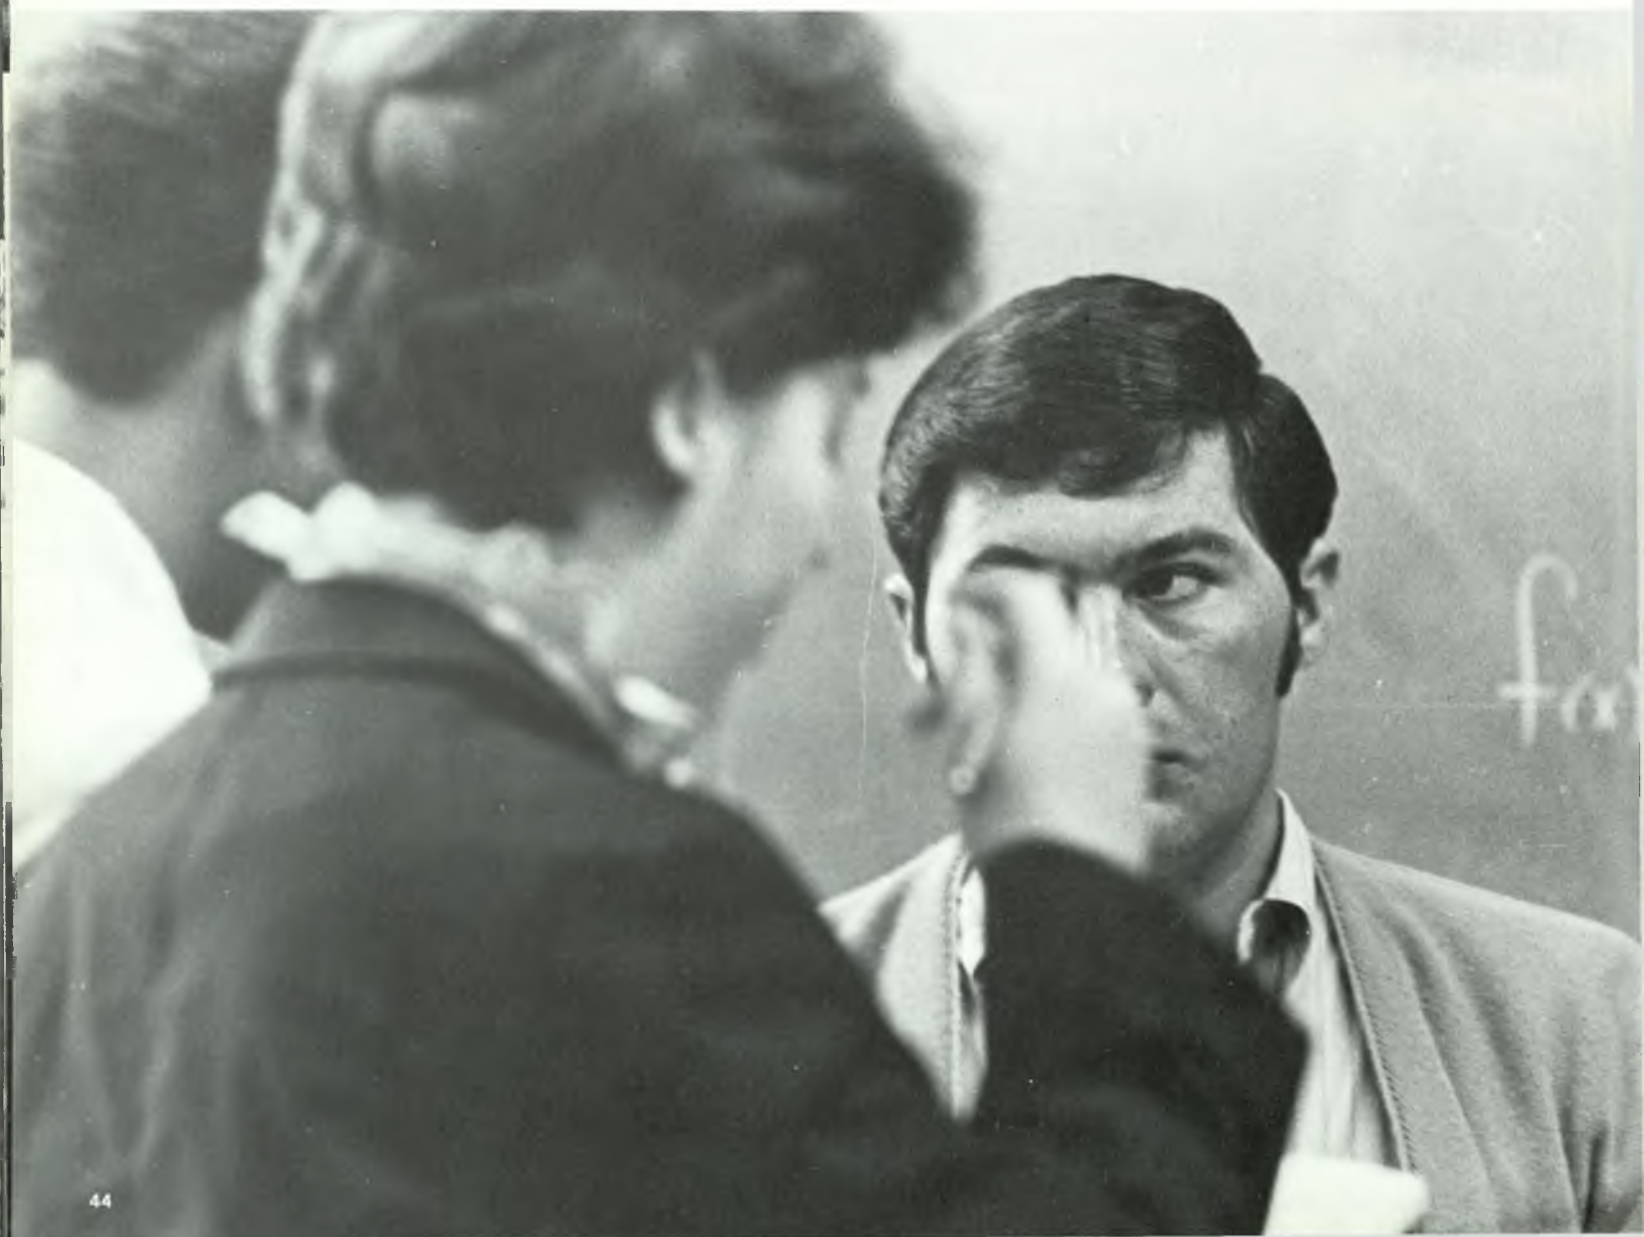

And We Stare

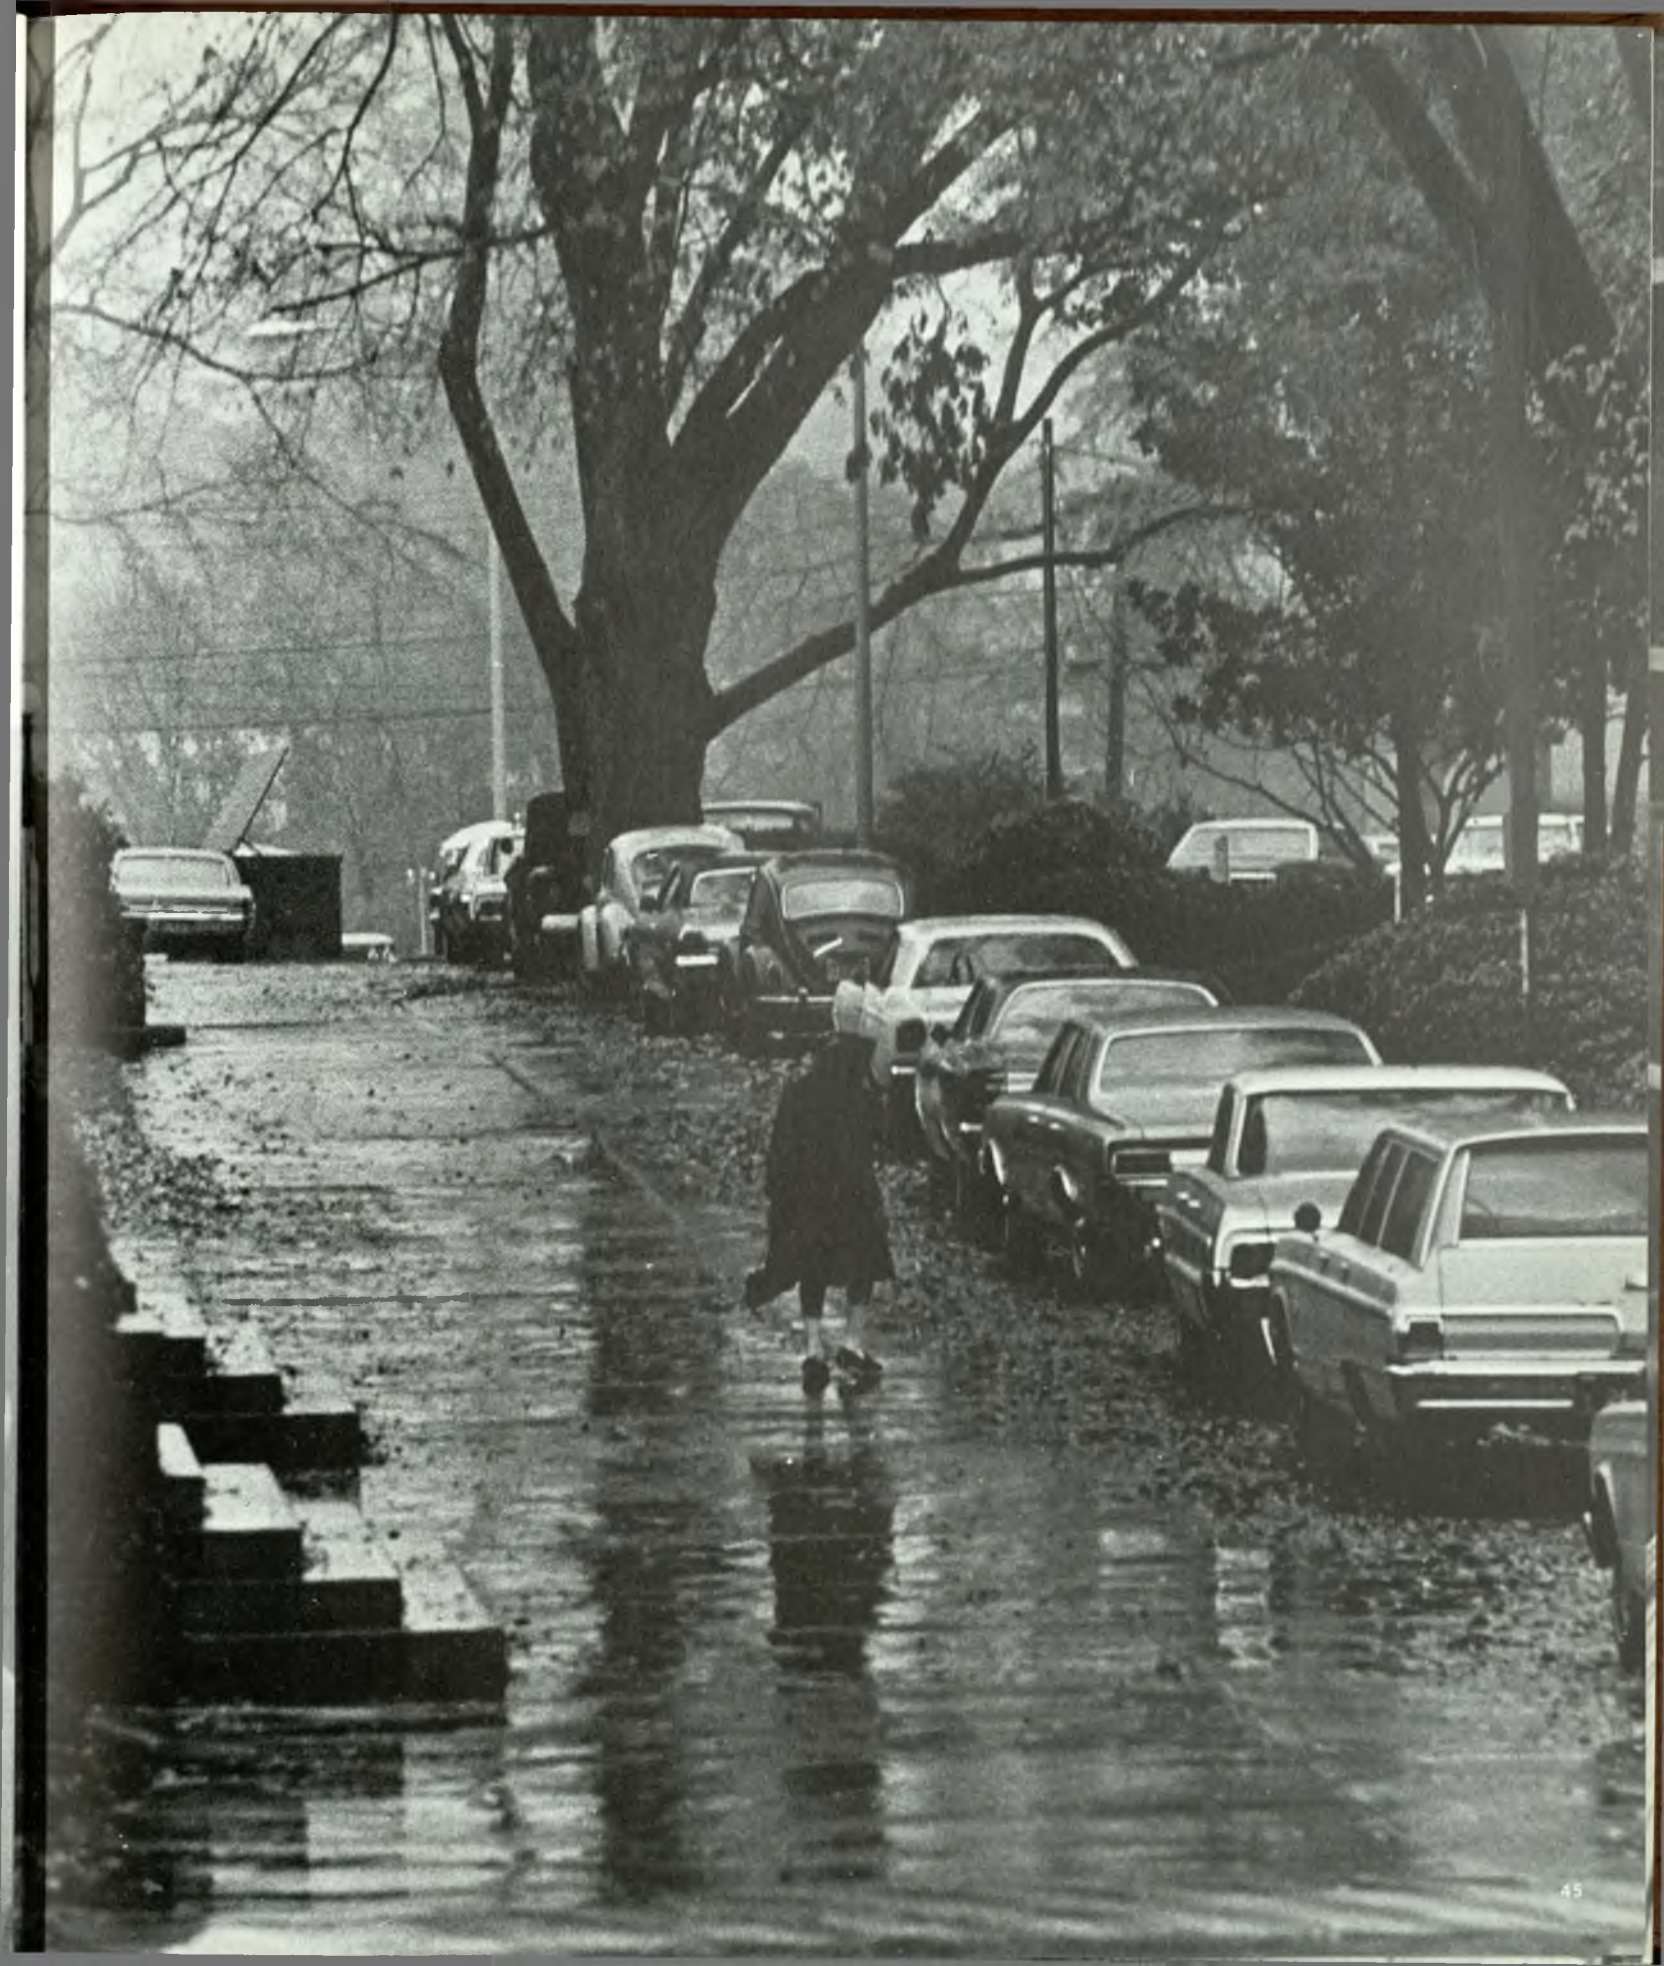

And the World Passes by

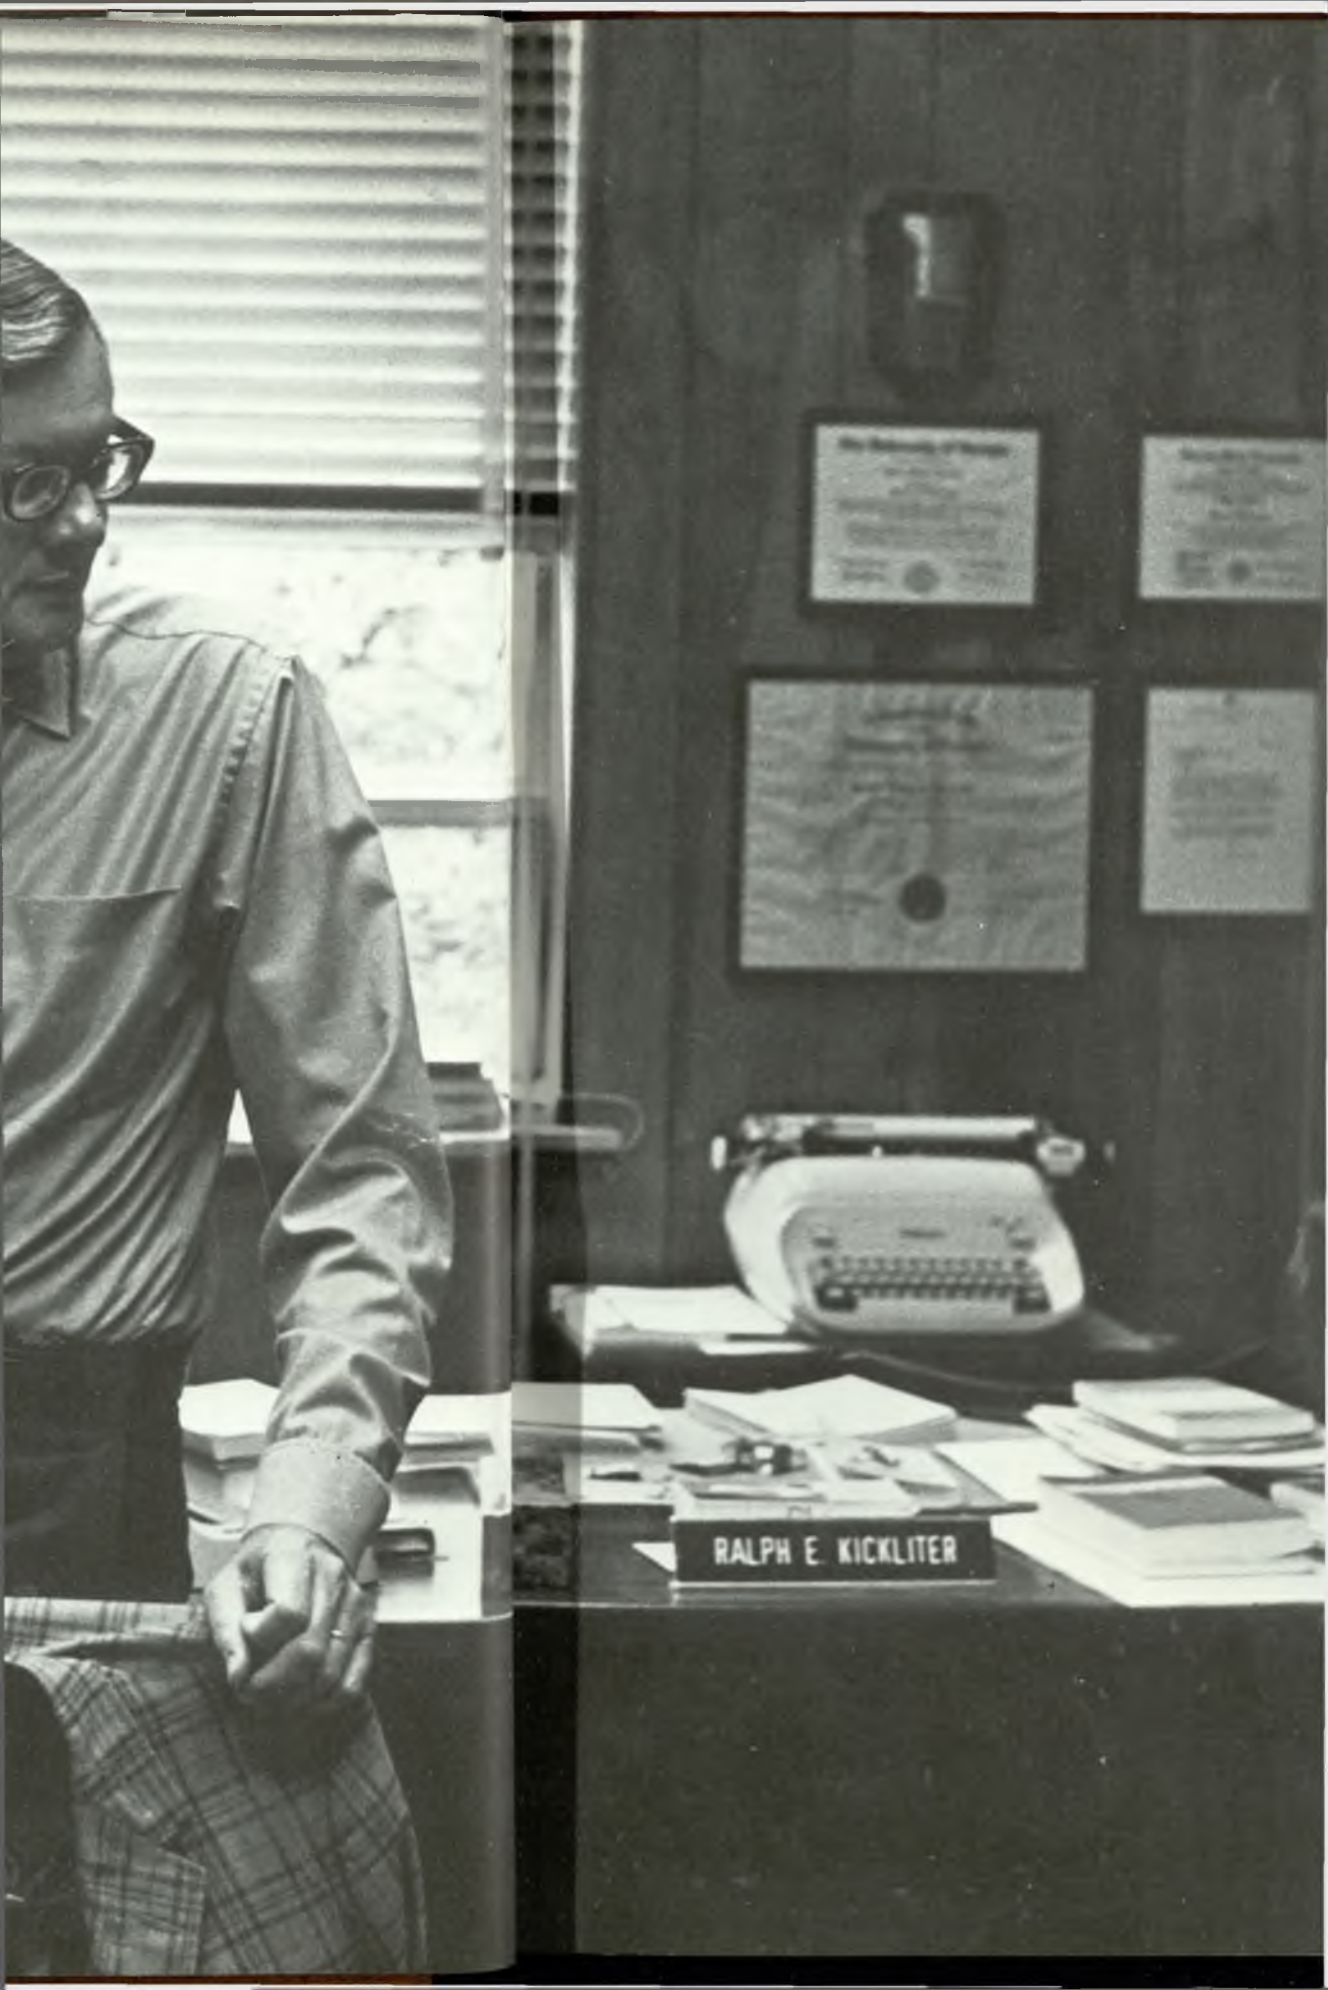

The fellow in the picture is Bob Green, a local lawyer. In February he tried to protect two long-haired college students from a construction worker and was severely beaten. He's a pretty good fellow.

We Learn Stubbornness
From Ourselves, and Discretion From Others.

We Are a Peculiar People

The Book . . . for What It's Worth

We Are That Most Distrusted Group, Children of an Adult Age.

But There Are Freaks of Every Kind in This World.

And We Join Our Opposites Very Well.

We Come From Absurd Negative Backgrounds

But Remember the Best of Our Past

We Bear Life
as Patiently
as Any Man
