104 To Receive Degrees June 2nd.

FOUR HUNDRED TO GET DIPLOMAS

Bishop Warren A. Candler and Miss Lucy Gage are Commencement Speakers

At the commencement exercises to be held on June 2, 104 will receive degrees. This is the largest class to graduate from G. S. C. W. 400 will receive normal diplomas and 20 will receive commercial certificates. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Bishop Warren A. Candler of Atlanta. Bishop Candler has spoken in Milledgeville before and is well known here. Miss Lucy Gage, associate professor of elementary education at Peabody College, will deliver the baccalaureate address Monday morning. Miss Gage is considered a very fine speaker and the college is fortunate in having her to speak. Her subject will be, "Education for Growing Womanhood."

DR. W. T. WYNN NAMED PRES. OF GEORGIA ENGLISH COUNCIL

At the recent meeting of the Georgia Education Association in Macon, Dr. W. T. Wynn was named President of the Georgia English Council. Miss Catharine Scott was elected Secretary of the council.

Both Dr. Wynn and Miss Scott took part on the programs of the convention. Dr. Wynn addressed the assembly on some phases of southern literature. Miss Scott spoke on the inductive teaching of grammar. Her paper will appear in the September issue of the Georgia Education Journal.

ALVORETTA KENAN ELECTED PRESIDENT OF Y. W. C. A. FOR SUMMER SCHOOL

The officers of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet for summer school were elected Thursday night. Miss Alvoretta Kenan was elected president; Miss Gertrude Gilmore, vice-president; Miss Mildred Butler, secretary; and Miss Paunee Riggsby, treasurer. The cabinet is as follows: Miss Gertrude Gilmore is chairman of the hospitality committee; Miss Mildred Butler of the publicity committee; Miss Sara Cross of the Bible Study committee; Miss Ruth Lord of the Vesper committee; Agnes Jones of the Morning Watch committee; and Miss Mary Dimon of the social committee.

The members of the Board are: Judge R. B. Russell, President; Judge John B. Hutcheson, Messrs. Earnest Camp, Millard Reese, M. S. Bell, Dr. E. A. Tigner and State School Superintendent M. L. Duggan.

CLASS OF 45 TO RECEIVE DIPS

Impressive Exercises to Mark Closing of Peabody High School Thursday Evening

Peabody High School will close one of its most successful years Thursday evening when forty-five young ladies of Baldwin county will receive their diplomas from Miss L. R. G. Burfeitt, principal of the high school, in the assembly room at the Georgia State College for women.

Impressive exercises will mark the closing of the year and the passing of another class from the preparatory school of the great woman's college.

Miss Mary Mildred Wynn, honor graduate of the class, will deliver the valedictory address for her class. The class poem will be read by Miss Alverene Batson and Miss Alicia Barnes will deliver the salutatory for her class.

Several songs by the class will complete a most delightful and enjoyable program.

Dr. J. L. Beeson will deliver a short address to the class members just prior to the presentation of the diplomas by Miss L. R. G. Burfeitt.

The following will receive diplomas:

Misses Louis Baker, Alicia Barnes, Alverene Batson, Rebecca Benford, Louise Blizzard, Anne Bone, Frances Bone, Christine Darden, Nanelle Dooley, Willetta Eberhart, Louise Etheridge, Louise Foster, Elizabeth Hooten, Stella Hubert, Caroline Humphries, Madelyn Humphries, Louise Ivey, Ruth Jackson, Louise Jeanes, Lois Kemp, Elizabeth Lee, Bula Lugand, LeRine Lundy, Katherine McMillan, Alta Martin, Bula Massey, Dorothy Montgomery, Marguerite Murphey, Anna Laura O'Quinn, Jane Patterson, Dorothy Montgomery, Marguerite Murphey, Anna Laura O'Quinn, Jane Patterson, Dorothy Smith, Lyndel Smith, Rachael Smith, Mary Clide Spivey, Mark Park Stewart, Leone Stewart, Bulah Thaxton, Ethel Torrance, Ethel Tye, Virginia Beach, Anne Wade, Ragenia Williams, Marguerite Wright, Mary Mildred Wynn, Elizabeth Yarbrough.

BISHOP H. J. MIKELL SPEAKS AT VESPERS

Bishop H. J. Mikell, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Atlanta, spoke at the vesper service on Sunday, May 18, in the auditorium. All those who are in the present Junior and Senior classes remember his visit to G. S. C. W. several years ago with a great deal of pleasure. Bishop Mikell is an eloquent and an interesting speaker and both the student body and the faculty enjoyed his talk on "Honor".

FRESHMEN WIN FIELD DAY SENIORS ARE SECOND

Field day which was held last week was won by the freshman class. The exercises were based on old English May day games. The program was directed by Miss Anna Elizabeth Miller, head of the physical education department.

The prologue of the program was given by the members of the Junior Gym class, who presented two dances, Pipes of Pan and Fairy Revels. Those taking part were, Annie Jo Moye, Mary Elliot, Margaret Candler, Carlyle Beggs, Etienne McGranie, Sallie Bryan, Mary Eberhart, Lucy Candler, Jo Hogan, Frances Scott, Mary Diamond and others.

Mary Owen Sallee, little daughter of Col. and Mrs. J. O. Sallee, was crowned May Queen. Her attendants were, Betty Allen, Madelyn Jackson, Laurelle Hardman, Betty Lawrence and Anne Sallee.

The ways in which the classes appeared on the field this year were very original and cleverly carried out. The freshman class were the Merry Men of Sherwood and were led by their president, Marie Goodyear as Robin Hood. The Sophomores, led by Vera Hunt as King Arthur, entered as Knights of the Round Table. The Junior class, dressed in gay costumes, entered as a band of gypsies. They were led by Caroline Russelle. The Senior class was divided in groups. Each group represented a guild. Margo Coyne announced each guild as it entered. After they had entered a group gave, My Man John, an Old English game. The class managers for field day were, Margo Coyne, Senior; Eddie Ingram, Junior; Mary Rogers, Sophomore; Margaret Linkous, Freshman.

DR. WEBBER TO PRESIDE AT REUNION OF CLASS

Dr. George Harris Webber has been invited to preside at the reunion of his class at Pennsylvania State College for Teachers which will meet during the commencement exercises of the college the latter part of this month.

ALUMNAE PRESIDENT

Miss Katherine K. Scott to welcome Alumnae to campus next week.

LARGE AUDIENCE WITNESSES OPENING OF PEABODY COMMENCEMENT

Senior Play Last Friday Night Well Acted Audience Well Pleased

"Little Women," a comedy in four acts, was the offering of the senior class of Peabody High School last Friday evening to usher in the annual commencement season of Peabody High School.

An audience that filled the assembly room was not only entertained but delighted with the unusual talent shown by the young actresses. The plot was one that held the closest interest and the large audience declared it one of the best ever given in Milledgeville.

The play was under the direction of Miss Marguerite Jackson. The following is the cast of players:

Mrs. March—Alverne Batson.
Mr. March—Lois Kemp.
Meg; Jo; Beth; Amy—their daughters—Frances Bone, Bulah Thaxton, Christine Darden.

Professor Bhaer—Anne Wade.
Laurie, his grandson—Rachel Smith.

Aunt—March—Regina Williams.
John Brooke—Dorothy Smith.
Hannah Mullet—Katherine McMillan.

Stage—Manager—Elizabeth Yarbrough.
Prompter—Jane Patterson.

Dr. Webber was president of his class for four years and under the rules of the college is president for life.

Miss Lillian McCormack, class of '26, is Traveling Library Assistant, Ga. Library Commission, State Capitol, Atlanta, Ga.

HONOR MEMORY OF 1ST PRESIDENT

Portrait of Dr. J. Harris Chappell Given by Alumnae to Be Unveiled at Graduation Exercises

Members of the Alumnae Association of the Georgia State College for Women, who were students during the years that Dr. J. Harris Chappell served as President, will present to the college an oil painting of the first president during the commencement exercises which begin May 30th.

The place selected for the picture to be hung is opposite that of Dr. Parks. Mrs. Dixon Williams and Mrs. E. A. Tigner have directed the drive for funds to have the portrait restored after it had been burned in the chapel building several years ago. The presentation will be made on Monday, June 2nd, during the commencement exercises.

It has been announced by Dr. J. L. Beeson that the exercises closing the year will begin on May 30th with the class day exercises of the Sophomore normal class. The senior class will have their class exercises on May 31st.

The commencement program which will consume four days will be unusually brilliant and the largest class in history will receive degrees and diplomas.

ANNUALS DISTRIBUTED TO STUDENT BODY

The 1930 Spectrum arrived Monday and are now being distributed to the student body. The book is one of the best ever put out and much praise is due the editor and her staff.

The Spectrum is dedicated to Judge Russell, President of the Board of Trustees. Judge Russell has been a friend of the college from the beginning and has done much for the college. He will arrive Saturday to be present during Commencement exercises.

Some of the features of the book are: beauty section, campus views, snapshots of the seniors, snapshot section, pictures of this year's class trip, pictures of Blue Ridge and Joycliff. The introduction of the book is in color. This is the first time that color has been used in the Spectrum and it adds much to it.

MRS. M. M. PARKS RETURNS FROM CALIFORNIA

Mrs. M. M. Parks and Miss Dorothy Parks have returned home from Berkeley, Cal., where they have been the past year, while Miss Parks was a student at the University of California. They are at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bass.

BRUCE BARTON WRITES ON SHEEPSKIN BLUES

Good Advice Given in July Good House Keeping

First of all, the world of business is much more friendly than it looks to the youngster who gazes up at it from outside. There are some employers who regard every applicant as a nuisance and every addition to the payroll as only one more deduction from the net profits; but they are a minority, and they never become the leaders. The intelligent business man recognizes that the continuance of his operations is absolutely dependent upon his ability to persuade young people to lend him their youth and ideas.

One of my first employers was a man whose business was growing rapidly at the time and has since assumed a leading place in its field. I was hired as a sort of general assistant, and he gave me carte blanche to relieve him of as many of the smaller duties as I could handle. He made only one reservation.

"It has been my rule to see every applicant for a position," he said, "and I want to continue to do so. Don't think you are doing me a favor by keeping out of my office any young man or woman who wants a job. This is a business of ideas, and we never can tell when some kid will pop in here with an idea that can be turned into a lot of money."

Whenever a boy or girl could show him something good that had been published in a college paper, it counted in the applicant's favor.

"In order to write clearly a man or woman must first of all think clearly," he said.

The young person who sent us an intelligent letter of application was almost certain to be given an interview.

I recall one applicant who came at a time when there simply wasn't a single job in the place and, though the boss had a friendly talk with him, no hope was held out. To my surprise the young fellow turned up in the office at nine o'clock the following morning.

"We told you yesterday that we didn't have a job for you," I said. "Didn't you understand?"

"Oh, yes, I understood all right," he answered, "but I have made up my mind that I am going to work for your boss. He is the best man in New York to give me the training that I want. One of these bright mornings he is going to need another employee, and I shall be right here in the reception room where he will see me first."

Day after day he came back, sat in a chair in the outer office, and waited. One morning the boss found himself saddled with an annoying little charity job. In an unguarded moment he had told a committee of prominent society women that he would take care of the program for their annual horse show. It meant soliciting advertisements from Fifth Avenue shops, preparing the copy, and seeing the program through the printers. The boss was fussing about it when I went into his office, and deploring the weakness in his character which had allowed him to say yes.

"I have the solution," I told him. "We'll hire our friend who is sitting outside, and turn the whole thing over to him."

In a few minutes I had arranged it with our permanent applicant. He started off to meet the committee of ladies, who were among the richest and most famous in town.

On Saturday, when I handed him an envelope which contained $20, he laughed.

"I want to show you something," he said.

Turning his back to me, he lifted his coat, which fortunately was cut long according to the style of that time. I gasped. The seat of his trousers was worn through, and the tail of his shirt was plainly visible.

"The fact is that I haven't been eating very regularly these last few weeks," he explained. "I'm behind with my room rent, and naturally there wasn't any money for a new wardrobe. But I confess I've had a great kick out of my work with these millionaires. They probably think I am very polite, because when our meeting is over, I always back away from their presence. I wonder what they'd say if they knew the seat of my breeches is gone."

We just had to find a permanent place for him. We were sure that any man who would call on Mrs. Vanderbilt with his shirt tail hanging out would never let himself be daunted by any sort of business situation. Our judgment proved sound. He made rapid progress, and when he finally left it was to establish a successful business of his own.

His experience illustrates the second thing that I believe can be truthfully said: namely that while the business world is, on the whole, friendly toward young people, it is also engrossed in its own affairs and has little time for those who are hazy about where they want to go. This young man had made up his mind that he would work for us and nowhere else, and ultimately opposition faded out before the strength of his determination.

So many boys and girls knock on the door, and say, "I want a job." So few have done enough thinking in advance so that they can say:

"I know that I can make money for this company. I have taken time to study something about your business. I know definitely the job I want, I can tell you exactly why I would be to your advantage to have me in it."

That sort of conversation, backed up by facts, is usually enough to be pretty sure to get itself heard.

The third thing worth remembering is that the years go fast, and no one can afford to make more than two or three major mistakes. If you spend a year in a business and discover that you do not like it, that is important. I you spend three years in three different businesses before you discover just what you want to do most, that also may prove, in the long run, to be a good investment. But if you drift along until you are thirty or thirty-five without having secured a firm foothold, business men begin to be doubtful about you. Thousands of younger men and women have graduated from college since your day; they have more youth to give and are willing to give it cheaper.

It may sound contradictory, but I believe there is more danger in taking too good a job at first than there is in taking too bad a one. Or, to put it another way, those who start in farthest down have the best probability of climbing highest up. There are plenty of so-called "white-collar jobs" in the world, which pay fairly good salaries at the beginning. The man who takes one of these may go back to his first reunion to find that he is making more money than any body else in the class. His initial success may give him a sense of false security. He may not realize that the job which he has mastered so quickly can, in turn, be mastered just as quickly by somebody else. Such jobs are always at the mercy of a younger college graduate who comes off the campus knowing how to wear his clothes well and meet people pleasantly.

I happen to have been thrown early into contact with a printing press, and I have had a good time in the publishing and advertising business all my life. But if I had happened to begin soliciting insurance, or selling automobiles, or tending a drug store, I am sure that I should have found any of those business interesting. Indeed, whenever I hear successful men in any industry talk about their work, I realize that, to every man who really gives his best, his own business is the most exciting and satisfying in the world. This is the fourth thing that can be honestly said to sufferers from the "sheep-skin blues."

And the fifth is this—that youth has a powerful ally working always on its side. The name of that ally is Time.

I think it is only fair to add that often those who suffer most severely from "sheepskin blues" experience that greater suffering because they are gifted with greater imagination, which in the long run will carry them farthest.

Lincoln and Napoleon were both so discouraged in their early youth that they contemplated suicide. Saint Paul, having been exalted by his vision on the road to Damascus, disappeared into Arabia for three years, which must have been a very discouraging period, since he barely refers to it afterward. And even the Master Himself, having received His baptism and heard the voice from Heaven proclaiming Him the Son of God, was "immediately" taken into the wilderness and tempted of the devil.

The heights of Commencement Day have been followed promptly by the valley of discouragement in some of the best and greatest lives. The valley is a normal feature of the journey, and perhaps a necessary one. But for those who do not lose their courage there is a firm foothold and a chance to climb, and it is only just a few steps farther on.

DR. WEBBER NAMED ASSOCIATE EDITOR OF "SOCIAL SCIENCE"

Dr. George Harris Webber, head of the department of education and psychology, has been named an associate editor of "Social Science," which is the official organ of Pi Gamma Mu, the National Social Science Honorary Society. The current member of Social Science is the second number of volume five, having been published since November 1925. Although each edition has shown an improvement over the preceding one, the present volume is the best one yet. The duties of Dr. Webber will require original articles, editing, and book reviews in the field of education. It is interesting to note the wide recognition received by members of the faculty of the Georgia State College for Women.

SIGNIFICANT COURSES FOR THE SUMMER SESSION G. S. C. W.

"This is an age of efficiency and scientific investigation". The field of education has shown this reaction more than that of any other. The old dogmatic attitude that this shall be in the curriculum simply because it has always been there will not suffice. Children in the modern school are no longer huddled together in heterogeneous groups. The objective test which gives a square deal to the child has taken the place of the old examination depending upon the whim of the teacher. These needs will be met by giving courses in tests and measurements. These courses will be offered by Dr. W. T. James, a visiting instructor who will take the place of Dr. Thos. B. Meadows of the department of education and psychology, for the summer, while Dr. Meadows is studying at the University of California. Dr. James is from the department of education and psychology of the Mississippi Woman's College.

THIEF STEALS AUTO DR. MCGEE

A thief entered the house of Dr. S. L. McGee and stole the keys to his automobile that had been left in his desk and made his get-away unnoted.

Dr. and Mrs. McGee had gone out for the evening when the robber entered the house. The robber took the key and one dollar and fifty cents in money and went to the garage and drove Dr. McGee's Essex sedan away.

The theft was not discovered until Tuesday morning. Police were notified but no clues have been found.

DR. TIGNER GIVES OLD INVITATION TO MUSEUM

Dr. E. A. Tigner has given an interesting old invitation to the Georgia History Museum at G. S. C. W. According to a recent announcement of Dr. Armanda Johnson, head of the Department of History. The invitation reads as follows:

"The city of Milledgeville requests the honor of your presence Thursday November 27, 1890, to commemorate the laying of the cornerstone of the Girls Normal and Industrial School."

"Committee: Hon. P. J. Cline, Mayor, Chairman, W. T. Conn, T. F. Newell, R. N. Lamar, Dr. T. W. Hall, A. Joseph, J. C. Whitaker, J. L. Sibley, L. N. Callaway, Hon. Robert Whitfield, R. W. Roberts, J. Caraker, Dr. T. O. Powell, G. T. Wiedenman, Joseph E. Pottle, J. N. Moore, C. R. Harper, Hon. D. B. Sanford, and Mayor J. Colton Lynes."

Dr. Tigner has already given a number of interesting and valuable things to the museum, all of which are prized very highly.

VALEDICTORIAN PEABODY HIGH SCHOOL ANNOUNCED MARY MILDRED WYNN CHOSEN

Miss Mary Mildred Wynn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Wynn, has the honor of being first honor student and valedictorian of the 1930 graduating class of Peabody High School. Not only has Miss Wynn made a brilliant scholastic record, but she has also been outstanding in the school activities.

Miss Alicia Barnes, second honor graduate, will deliver the salutatory. Misses Regins Williams, Elizabeth Yarborough, Elizabeth Hooten, Alvern Batson, and Mary Parks Stuart will take part in the class day exercises.

SOPHOMORE COMMISSION ELECTED THEO HOTCH PRES.

At a recent meeting of the Freshman class the member of Sophomore commission were elected as follows:

Theo Hotch, Carolyn Moye, Marie Goodyear, Nell English, Dorothy Lowe, Fern Cox, Martha Shaw, Frances Adams, Martha Parker, Virginia Lanier, Elizabeth Smith, Martha Chapman, Marion Napier, Iavonia Newman, Helen Hensley, Lucile Little, Elizabeth Morgan, Rebecca Mark-walter, and Elizabeth Cowart.

From these members the officers for next year were elected. Theo Hotch is president; Helen Hasley was elected vice-president; Martha Chapman class secretary; and Marion Napier treasurer; Nora Ethel English as second vice-president of the Y. W. C. A. works especially with this group.

DR. BOLTON TO TEACH COURSE ON "THE PROBLEM CHILD"

"The child rules the home." This saying is true to a very large degree, rule in a sense quite different from the ordinary meaning of that word. The child becomes a problem, and is allowed to develop after his own distorted inclinations either because the parents are ignorant, or they just don't care. A knowledge of what to expect from the normal child, how to discover abnormal attitudes and treat them would save many a child from his own bad habits and possibly institutional treatment later. This knowledge is of vital interest to parents and also to teachers who stand in loco parentis. Dr. Eurie Belle Bolton will offer courses covering both the normal and the abnormal child.

G. S. C. PROFESSORS DELIVER COMMENCEMENT ADDRESSES

Members of the faculty of the Georgia State College for Women have been very much in demand as Commencement orators during this month.

Dr. E. H. Scott, Monday evening, delivered the literary address to the graduates of Antonton High School. On the same evening Dr. W. T. Wynn was in Toombsboro and Prof. O. A. Thaxton was in Stillmore.

Friday night Prof. Thaxton will go to Culverton High School for the commencement exercises there.

The Savannah Club of the G. S. C. W. Alumnae Association had a most delightful meeting on Saturday, May 3, 1930, at the DeSota Hotel in Savannah.

Miss Ethel Maree, President of the group, had charge of the luncheon. There were more than twenty members of the club present. The guest on this occasion were Miss Eleanor Hutton of Savannah, Miss Mary Brooks, member of the Executive Committee of the Alumnae, and Miss Katherine Scott, President of the Alumnae Association.

Miss Brooks responded when her name was called by thanking the group for their invitation and assuring them of the interest of the college in them.

Miss Scott was called on to tell something of the State Association work during the year. She spoke of the aims of the Alumnae during the year and of the attempted fulfillment of these aims.

Miss Maree spoke of the aims of the Savannah club and showed what excellent, progressive work they were carrying on.

Mrs. Turner asked that the college be told of the continued support of the Savannah club and that Dr. Beeson be notified of their loyalty and of their desire to do all within their power to help the college.

PEABODY SENIORS OBSERVE CLASS DAY MONDAY AFTERNOON.

One of the most delightful affairs of the commencement season came last Monday when the graduates of Peabody High School held their class day exercises on the campus.

Under the direction of Miss Louise Jeans the president of the class, a most interesting program was arranged. The exercises were conducted in regular parliamentary form. After the president had opened the meeting Miss Louise Baker, chairman of the program committee, took charge. Miss Elizabeth Yarborough was introduced and read the class history. Miss Elizabeth Hooten read the class prophecy and Miss Mary Parks Stewart closed the program as Giffonian. Dainty gifts were presented each member of the class.

CLASSES TO HOLD EXERCISES FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

The class day exercises of the seniors and sophomore-normals will be an interesting feature of the commencement exercises of G. S. C. W.

Both classes have planned most interesting programs and special features will mark the celebration of the final ceremonies of the two graduating groups. Class history, prophecy with the presentation of a gift to the college will be the outstanding features.

Mrs. Emmett Womack Hines and Emmett, Jr., and Martha Hines, of Washington City, will arrive Thursday to spend a month with Judge and Mrs. E. R. Hines at Greenacre.

Fourth Grade Puppets Show Big Success

Pupils in Peabody Practice School Make Marionettes and Write Plays Are Acted by Dolls

Tony Sarg would have watched in amazement the performance of the Fourth Grade Marionettes last Thursday morning in the assembly room of the Peabody High School, not only because it was so interesting but because of the fact that the dolls which dangled on the strings were made by little boys and girls who have not reached their eleventh year of age.

An audience of mothers and friends filled the little assembly room at G. S. C. W. and many of them were like the proverbial Missourian, wanted to be shown.

The stage upon which the puppets were to perform was patterned after the large stage in the auditorium. The children studied the several stages in the college plant and then designed theirs. It was a nice piece of work with its curtains, foot lights and scenery. No fluke about their curtains either, they were operated by strings, rolling up and down just like the real thing.

Even after Laurette Bone had delivered the address of welcome, there was still doubt written on many of the faces that were in the audience. Not until the curtain was drawn back and the first little doll was danced in suspended on several strings did the doubters change to surprise, amazement and awe.

"Life in Many Lands" was the title of the first show. People of the various countries of the world were shown and with each doll there came an automatic change in the scene. The story was read by a member of the class as the little dolls acted. A thorough knowledge of geography was necessary for this play to be put on.

History came into play with the second performance which was entitled, "How Georgia Came to Be." General Oglethorpe would no doubt have believed he had been changed to a dwarf, such a speaking likeness appeared on the stage in the form of a little doll to take the part of Georgia's founder. The story of Georgia's founding was told and most vividly done.

A story with a moral completed the three plays that the children gave in their initial performance of their puppets. "Pinocchio" the little Italian boy who wanted things without working for them, was interpreted in a most convincing fashion.

Between each play, members of the class sang several songs and they showed rare talent as songsters in addition to their marvelous genius as performers and manufacturers of marionettes.

Young Philip Chandler explained how he and his class mates had made the dolls and invited the people of the audience to inspect them.

Miss Mary Brooks is teacher of the class. The children designed the dolls and made the costumes for them. After they had completed the job of making the actors and stage they wrote the playlets to be acted. Combining history, geography, reading and English the class as a whole wrote the stories and when they were presented Thursday, the reading was very near perfect. You would have believed that people much older than the kiddies had been disappear behind the screen, had written and were reading the lines as the little dolls were made to perform with the aid of strings.

The writer enjoyed the program immensely and his thoughts were like many others that he heard expressed as he left the school, "unusual and remarkable, and an accomplishment done by children far beyond the average intelligence!"

The following are the children in the fourth grade:

PUPILS OF MISS McCLURE GIVE RECITAL SATURDAY

MUSIC WEEK

Milledgeville's annual music week celebrated each year by the music department of Georgia State College for Women directed by Miss Alice Lenore Tucker came to a close Friday evening after a brilliant week of musical programs.

Friday night the G. M. C. band under the auspices of Major Osterman concluded the series of programs. The stirring marches of Sousa, the entrancing melodies of Grand Opera and the thrilling tunes of popular favor made this one of the best programs the band has ever given.

Thursday evening a large audience heard Lucia di Lammermoor sung by the Sophomore class and quartettes Mrs. Longino, Mrs. Long, Mr. Drukenmiller and Mr. Barnes sang the solo and quartette parts while the three hundred members of the Sophomore class sang the choruses under the direction of Miss Tucker. The critics acclaimed as wonderful. Earlier in the week recitals were contributed to the weeks program by the college orchestra, the clubs, piano, History in a certain time.

MY GARDEN

It seemed as if the garden whole Blazed with splendor yet untold. Drops of water on the leaves Leaves that quivered in the breeze.

A pansy here—a rose there Fragrant perfume filled the air; Lovely falls caught the sun Whose rays in turn met one by one

Yellow, red, violet, blue— Flawless of every shade and here Bees and birds chirped gayer here, Secluded in this garden dear.

The pebbled path, the flowering beds, The birds and bees, the nodding heads, Together make this garden fair A precious spot of beauty rare.

ROUTINE

Day in day out The same old grind Same work to do

The same old kind

The sun comes up The day begins And out you go The same old thing

The day is long And hours dull Sometimes a change But soon a hill

Day in, day out some work to do The same routine Far me, for you

MISS ANDERSON ENTERTAINED LIBRARY ASSISTANTS GIVE SHOWER

The library assistants entertained Miss Gertrude Anderson with a kitchen shower in the college tea room.

Thursday afternoon.

The guest met in Bell parlor and then a delightful program was given with Robertine McClendon presiding. Each person found her partner for the afternoon by fitting the pieces of an wedding bell. Mildred O'Neal sang two solos, Sleepy Valley and The Sun is Waiting for the Sunrise. These numbers were followed by a contest, a bookish romance, which was won by Susie Dell Reamy and Mildred O'Neal. Gertrude Gilmore played the piano during the program.

After the program the group went to the tearoom which was beautifully decorated with larkspur and shaster daisies, which carried out the lavender and white color scheme.

Robertine McClendon acted as toast mistress. Anna Williams gave a toast to Miss Anderson as a friend, Ruth Hightower gave a toast to Miss Anderson as a librarian and Mary Moore gave a toast to Miss Anderson as a bride.

The gifts were brought in and presents to Miss Anderson by Susie Dell Reamey who was dressed as a delivery boy.

The guest list included Misses Gertrude Anderson, Mary Burns, Austelle Adams, Jimmie Deck, Margo Coyne, Sara Cross, Mary Deck, Helen Green, Helen Hagan, Ruby Hall, Sara Harvey, Ruth Hightower, Madelyn Jordan, May Kittles, Grace Whiggam, Marian White, Susie Dell Reamy, Frances Reeves, Ford Staples, Rachel Cone, Helen Holsenbeck, Catherine Shedd, Catherine Russell, Gertrude Peacock, Margaret Durden, Mary Moore, Isabelle Tappen, Ethel Wood, Jewel Dodd, Frances Adams, Anna Williams, Robertine McClennon, Gertrude Gilmore and Berna Hartly.

Jokes

Mandy: "You-all reminds me of one of them flying machines."

Rastus: "How cum, woman, how cum? 'Cause I is such a high flyer?"

Mandy: "No, sah, cullud man; it's jest 'cause you ain't no use on earth."

"But not many fellows can do this said the magician, as he turned his automobile into a lamp post.

Inquisitive Old Lady: "Where did those large rocks come from?"

Tired Guide: "The glaciers brought them down."

I. O. L.: "But where are the glaciers?"

T. G.: "They have gone back after more rocks."

Magistrate: "The evidence shows that you threw a brick at the constable."

Burly One: "It shows more'n that—it shows I hit him."

"Gimme a marceling iron and a bottle of carbolic acid."

"What are you going to do with them?"

"Gonna curl up and die."

He: Do you know the gorilla song?
She: Why no, I don't believe so

He: Gorilla my dreams I love you—

College is an institution of loaning.

"Do you think you'll be able to manage your husband?"

"Oh, yes, if I just stick to my guns."

She—"This dining room goes back to Louis the Fourteenth."

He—"That's nothing. My whole living room set goes back to Sears, Roebuck, the fifteenth."

"Did the doctor remove your appendix?"

"Feels to me like he removed my whole table of contents."

Immanuel, the Brave Torcador—

"Ah, Senorita, tonight I will steal beneath your balcony and sing you a sweet serenade."

Consuello, the Beautiful Senorita—

"Oo. And I will drop you a flower."

Immanuel—"Ah, in a moment of mad love?"

Consuello—"No, in a pot."

Street Car Conductor—"How old are you, little girl?"

Little Boston Girl—"If the corporation doesn't object, I'd prefer to pay full fare and keep my own statistics."

THE SCIENCE CLUB

The Social Committee of the Science Club at the last meeting of the club announced plans for a farewell picnic. The members are invited to hike to the Oconee River on Saturday afternoon, May 17, 1930, leaving the campus about 4:30 P. M. while at the river the new officers for the fall term, 1930 will be elected, and the five-dollar prize offered by Dr. Lindsey will be awarded to that member of the science club turning in the most valuable collection of scientific news during this year.

It is hoped that each member of the science club will arrange to attend the picnic.

The City Beautiful

By Harry Stillwell Edwards
(Atlanta Journal of Wednesday evening, May 21, 1930.)

Many southern cities are beautiful in their wealth of classic architecture, attractive flower gardens and kindly, gracious inhabitants, but I am one of those who believe that Georgia's ancient capital, Milledgeville, has no equal in the number and diversity of those things which delight and elevate the soul. There is infinite appeal in its architecture, framed in immemorial trees, in the lavish display of color in its gardens in its clean, paved streets, velvet lawns, and the grand old hills that run out to the horizon and leave it, a jewel, set in jade under the inverted turquoise cup which is its sky. And there is appeal of another kind, but not less delightful, in the easy courtesy and friendliness of the people—courtesy unobtrusive; friendliness sincere and unselfish.

Nor is this all. The past clings to Milledgeville, as if the souls of the splendid men and women of other days still wandered among its senes; gallant men and lovely women who helped to build up that immortal tradition, "the Old South," which is destined to become America's fairest legacy; who gave of their brains and souls to education, to Godliness, to art and music, dissolving themselves in new generations, as Cleopatra's pearl passed into sparkling wine.

But it is the new generations risen from the mysteries of the past that today crown Milledgeville with its greater loveliness; the loveliness of vibrant youth and incomparable grace. Within a few tree-sheltered squares 600 Georgia girls, reborn, have returned to lay their treasures at their little mother's feet, and take from her gentle hands immortal gifts. And not far away, in halls that once rang with the eloquence of the south's greatest orators, are hundreds of manly youths wearing their country's uniform, training for life's conflicts, come as they may—to defend the principles of their government in court, in legislative hall, and on the hustings; to carry its flag to victory.

In truth, gazing upon these splendid boys and girls, one is seeing not alone the Georgia of today, but of yesterday and tomorrow.

One day, perhaps, some Georgian whose inspiration has flowed out of a beautiful life that once graced the homes and gardens of the dear old city, will return to erect a monument to Milledgeville—a noble woman holding her infant, her face lifted toward the east and full of the beauty of holiness. And at her feet carved, in the rock, ten words—THE PAST IN HER HEART; THE FUTURE IN HER ARMS. For such is Milledgeville.

And if to me were given the honor of raising this testimonial I would have it carved from Georgia's purest marble, by a son or daughter of the south.

The state of Georgia has much to boast of in educational institutions. Great colleges carry on for the future in many sections, and a thousand noble scholols attest the eagerness of her people to keep at the front in mental development, but the University at Athens—a great son of Milledgeville—and the colleges at Milledgeville, belong peculiarly to the state; and, without prejudice to the former, sentiment will always cling closer to the spot whence are to come the little mothers of tomorrow. If you, respected readers, fail to journey to this cradle of so many hopes and view the birth of new eras there, you are perhaps neglecting your best delights. For there, in your own historic halls, are your own children living upward to God, inspired by your best traditions, trained and guided by those to whom you have intrusted them; men and women of great hearts, powerful intellects, incorruptible souls, and compelling genius.

DR. E. H. SCOTT TO SPEAK IN EATONTON

Dr. E. H. Scott will deliver the literary address at the graduating exercises of the Eatonton High School on March 26th.

Dr. Scott is deeply interested in Georgia education and is in close touch with the high school work. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Mercer University and is leading in the educational program of Georgia.
