You Can, Will Cope With What's Ahead

(Eds. Note: This editorial was copied from the Birmingham News because it forms the best piece of advice to the graduating seniors we have ever read. All credits and our hats off to Alyce Billings Walker, director of the Women's News department.)

Dear All of You About to be Graduated:

I have been trying to recall some of the speeches I heard when I was about to be graduated, hoping that I could draw from them some remembered wisdom to pass on to you.

It isn't that there wasn't anything worth remembering from those speeches. It's simply that I was graduated from college in 1928.

That was a year when the United States was riding high, wide, and handsome, smug that there would always be "two cars in every garage and a chicken in every pot."

CRUMBLE

But, came 1929, with it came strange rumblings. Before it had ended, all our high living began to crumble, then crash along with the stock market. You've heard the story. You know that 1928 and 1929 marked the beginning of the end of a way of life in this country, and indeed, throughout the world.

So the counsel we were given by commencement speakers "in my day" didn't hold good for very long. So much that no one expected happened so quickly.

I do not flatter myself that I can do better than did those who counselled us in 1928. So much is still happening so quickly. What is good advice today about how to be successful by material standards may be worth little tomorrow, except as it is given and accepted in broad, flexible terms. I'd rather write to you, therefore, about things that are unchanging.

A PRAYER

You are about to become a full-fledged participant in the seeing, struggling, laboring dying drama of men and nations. I beseech you to root your lives in something more than property and worldly reputation.

I would ask you to substitute for such time-worn "commencement" slogans as "Hitch your Wagon to a Star," a prayer by the late Peter Marshall, chaplain of the United States Senate.

"Oh, God, our Father," prayed Peter Marshall, "let us not be content to wait and see what will happen, but give us the determination to make the right things happen . . . Give us the courage to stand for something, lest we fall for anything."

UPON YOU

The challenge of your era is that question, for upon your answer hangs the survival and extension of the kind of life we know is good.

But just knowing what democracy is, isn't enough. It must be practiced in its fullest meaning by individuals and nations. That's where my contemporaries and I have fallen short, have betrayed you. We have just THOUGHT we were practicing democracy. Had we done a better job of actually living it, there wouldn't have been and wouldn't now be again the necessity for so much dying for it on battlefields.

We, my generation, have professed a burning desire for one peaceful world, but we haven't really taken time to find the true meaning of one world. We know that democracy is the right way to that one peaceful world, but we haven't produced a genuine article to sell to the rest of the world. We have glossed over its defects.

BETTER SALESMEN

You have to be better salesmen than we have been. Upon your success in this assignment depends all the other things of the life ahead for you. I know you will do the job because you have vaster knowledge and are more realistic than was the class of '28.

You have something else — an unshamed, natural faith in God. Cling to it. It will fortify you against soul-destroying rebelliousness and convert your knowledge into wisdom.

KITTY MARIE SMITH WILL HEAD MODERN DANCE, SECOND YEAR

Kitty Marie Smith, for the second year in succession, has been elected president of the Modern Dance Club to serve next year. Other officers are Martha Lancaster, vice president; Betty Stewart, secretary; Jane Horne, treasurer; Rena Marshall, costume chairman; McLinda Abbot, research chairman; Jo Ann Bridges and Ruth Downs, music chairmen.

Dining Hall Opens Kitchen To Visitors

Approximately 135 students and faculty members were given an opportunity to see their dining hall in full scale operation when the dining hall held open house last Tuesday. The purpose of the open house was to give students who had not seen the kitchen equipment a chance to see behind the scenes and to give them a greater appreciation of the preparation of their food.

The guests were shown all the kitchen equipment in action . . . the huge grill on which meat is cooked, the large baking oven, and the automatic dishwashing machines. They were also shown through the meat storage room and general rooms. Punch and cookies were served to all guests.

Grand Old Man Of U. S. Education To Visit GSCW

Dr. William Heard Kilpatrick, Grand Old Man of American Education, will visit G.S.C.W., June 1. Dr. Kilpatrick is in Georgia primarily to attend the 60th reunion of his class at Mercer University. Philosopher, educator, lecturer, author, administrator, and editor, Dr. Kilpatrick was today described by G.S.C.W.'s President Guy H. Wells as "the foremost educational philosopher of the age." The author of many books and a multitude of articles, Dr. Kilpatrick has a new book, The Philosophy of Education, just off the presses, and a biography of him is now being written.

Since his retirement from Teachers College of Columbia University, Dr. Kilpatrick has served as visiting professor of education at many universities throughout the nation. He has come regularly to GSCW for many years, often for a series of lectures and consultations, extending over several days.

The Modern Dance Club performed their last concert of the season in Macon at Miller High School, giving a repeat performance of their Recital during the High School Guest Week End.

A banquet in the Miller High School cafeteria was given the group in honor of their trip to Macon by the students and faculty of Miller.

Miss Jane Mitchell has recently joined the club.

TO THE 1951 SENIORS

We dedicate this last issue of the Colonnade. In it we have tried to collect the remembrances of your last few weeks at GSCW . . .

To the Royal Purple, we tip our hats — a wonderful class of wonderful girls. "It's been good to know ya!"

W. F. Closes Year's Activities

Mauriel Shipp has been elected president of Wesley Foundation for the coming year. Other officers include: Annette Chalker, vice president; Bill Henry, vice president; Sue Liles, secretary; and Lucille Middleton, treasurer. A new council of approximately 20 students has also been elected and was installed April 1.

State Spring Planning Retreat for the MSM was held at Mt. Zion near Griffin, Ga. Jan. Blackwell, Secretary of the Georgia MSM, Hazel Creasy, councilman, Maurine Shipp, Unette Lamb and Harold Stinson represented the Milledgeville W.F.

The annual Wesley Foundation Weekend was held April 21-22, with Rev. John Wilson, Tifton as its speaker. The theme of the weekend was Be Strong, An Old South Banquet was the highlight of the Saturday evening program. The spring retreat was held at Hillside Retreat, Dublin the last weekend in April. About 35 students and adults were present and drew up plans for the next year's work.

About 5 students have signed up to go on Fellowship Teams and Caravans. Two representatives will go to the National Convocation for Methodist Youths in Indiana in August. Harold Stinson, Bill Henry, Sonny Mohr, Olin King, and Mauriel Shipp will attend the Southeastern Regional Training Conference at Junaluska, N. C.

The W. F. has continued its active deputational program this quarter by sending deputations to Dublin, Clinton, Eastman, Hawkinsville, and Emory University. Rev. Stinson and Dr. W. T. Wynn will represent the Milledgeville student group at the State Inter-Conference Commission for Youth Work on April 15, at Beale Tift College.

Spring Rule Changes To Give Underclassmen Night Riding

The following rules were approved by the Faculty Committee last Thursday afternoon to go into effect fall quarter:

1. Students may have registered dates on Friday nights from 7 until 11. They may attend the picture show or remain on campus, using all specified areas except the rec halls.
2. All students must be in their rooms for 11 o'clock house check. Omit rule number 4 under house check. (On trial for one quarter; full responsibility on students.)
3. Students may stop in the city limits of Milledgeville while riding.
4. Students may have Sunday evening campus or church dates from 7-11. They may go to the drugstore or restaurant downtown.
5. Students may ride with dates and approved friends from 7-11 on Saturday and Sunday nights. Juniors may have both nights; sophomores may choose one.
6. Mixed groups upon the approval of the Dean of Women (during office hours) may swim in places approved by the college.
7. Students may have supper either before or after the show.
8. A special bulletin concerning blue jeans will be posted on the boards from the Deans' office.
9. All proposals concerning Honor Board as read in student-body meeting approved.

The Time Has Come To Quit Counting And Start Weighing In GSCW Case

(From March 20, 1951, Atlanta Journal)
By PIERCE HARRIS

O.K.—We won't argue—just say I'm simple and I'll sign it; but let me ask it anyway: Do you just HAVE to have 1,200 students before it's a great woman's college.

And do you just HAVE to show a profit. Doesn't sending a host of young women, with minds adorned and beautified with all the cultural arts and graces, out all over the Southland to take places in home and community life mean ANYTHING.

While the Georgia State College for Women (GSCW) is in the lesser headlines, with an occasional shivving in the Republic of Letters, let's take an honest look at the REAL picture of this school, which for many years, has been doing just that—sending cultured and Christian young women out into life, "worthy and well-qualified" to wear the crown of noble womanhood as she translates into community life the ideals she carries with her as she departed from this classic campus of this great college—an asset Georgia has been proud of for many years.

Sensible Suggestion

Dr. Forney Hutchinson, a distinguished minister of some years back, once looked at the stream of new members being brought into the church and then at the unchanging records of activity, apparently unaffected by the stream of "new life" and made this pertinent observation, "I think the time has come when we should quit COUNTING and go to WEIGHING." And application of this sensible suggestion to our educational difficulties might help.

Suppose the enrollment at GSCW does fall from 1200 to 900 or even 800. What of it. Does it indicate that the era in which a college places the supreme emphasis on educated womanhood has passed. Not at all. We all know of the trend among young women to attend the university and they can give you apparently good reasons. I have had some part in helping a number of fine girls attend the college at Athens and have no regrets, for in more than one case, the young ladies came away, not only with an education, but with a HUSBAND as well.

I must say in passing, however, I have not noticed that attending GSCW constituted a handicap in the matrimonial marathon, and know of cases where students from this institution were well along the road of moonlight and roses while some mighty pretty girls from Georgia were still no further along than the semi-finals.

"We can't run the school at a LOSS," said a friend to whom I spoke about the importance of preserving this great woman's college. Why not? Is it foreign to the prevailing pattern of things to

Quarantine Isn't The Answer

(Eds. Note: The old phrase "There are two questions to every side," must be upheld again. Here are two guests editorials on "bad attitudes" that present two sides of an ancient question: "How do you attitude today?"

Epidemic Spreads!

The number of "bad attitudes" on campus seems to be increasing by leaps and bounds. There must be some loose germs around. Since this disease has grown almost to the epidemic stage, perhaps a curative should be found. If the malady is similar to appendicitis, maybe we should have something cut out instead of trying to administer purgatives.

What constitutes a "bad attitude" is a question debated pro and con. The answer seems to be: Opposition to those in power. (If another answer is more nearly correct, all it needs is a voice.) Taking this as a premise, we shall point out some general "bad attitudes" and consequent "cures" that have been applied. France, under Napoleon, had a "bad attitude" according to countries whose toes were being stepped on. The "cure" applied by the Congress of Vienna seemed to work. What was it? France was given a voice in the meeting and penalized very moderately. France, etc.

Socrates had a "bad attitude"; so he was killed. Yet for some reason, books containing his philosophy still circulate.

Well, it all adds up to this: Is there any cause for the "bad attitude" that's running loose around here? Or did it just come along with spring fever? It seems to be splitting our little social group into two factions: Those who are in power, and those who aren't—and don't want to be. The "in" group says, "Believe as I believe;" and the "out" group says, "Why should I?" Perhaps that's the trouble: "The 'why should I.'" If so, maybe the "in" group should do a little explaining and the "out" group a little listening. Maybe the "out" group needs some squelching; but that can't be done by repression, nor can it be done by flowery speeches in chapel.

When the "out" group kicks, why doesn't the "in" group ask how many times they've been to Student Council to air their views, instead of taking the "good attitude" of "we'll teach you who's boss around here!" There's one gal on campus who could show a lot of people's who's boss—and in a way that no one could dispute, because there's could reasoning behind her explanations, but then we can't expect one person to do everything.

(This is a one-sided editorial. There's a slim chance that the other side is also floating around campus—listen in!)

run at a loss? specially when the "loss" can be charged up to "community service"—which in this case is no mere figure, but can be supported by facts?

My idea of a good investment either for an individual or an institution, is to invest in personality and character, and let the dividends be spread over the entire lifetime of the person assisted. Let him, or her, be IN DEBT for life. Let the debt be discharged in service and citizenship. I have seen it work—it WILL work.

"Til Pay You Back"

"Til pay you back." It was a pretty young girl speaking—and with great emotion, too. With somebody else's money, I had opened the way to college. She was appreciative. She was trying to say so with her, "Til pay you back" promise. "No," I told her. "You can't do that. You'll be

Epidemic Remedy

If it is true that there are bad attitudes on campus then there are reasons for those attitudes. And how are they going to be prevented or cured unless those having such feelings bring them out into the open.

What about this question of those in power? Under our democratic form of College Government, a student has the power to petition any person she chooses for an officer to represent her, and any student has the privilege to vote. Maybe only a few people do come to Student Council to find out what's going on concerning college regulations and activities, but every student has the privilege to attend if she so desires. A student might say that she fields she is neither wanted nor accepted by the Student Council Group; there hasn't been evidence that many people are trying to find out.

As for who's boss around here, I don't think we have a person at GSCW who is physically or mentally capable of bossing eight hundred students with as varied personalities and opinions as we students have. In order to live happily, we, as students, need to be a little more interested, enthusiastic and tolerant. Perhaps, most of all, tolerant. In the dictionary it means "allowing that which we do not believe," but in a simple way, it means respect for others plus a little kindness.

Bad attitudes can be more than opposition to those in power, it would seem. They can be directed by one group or toward a minority group. They aren't confined to this campus either. In fact, it seems that the whole world is being more or less torn apart right now by antagonism and intolerance or a lack of understanding between people.

What causes this? What can we do about it? One answer has been given time and again by our Student Council. They have never denied to any person the right to disagree and to suggest changes. (And they must uphold the rules and regulations to the point of being sometimes called "stupid," simply because no government can function unless it lives by its own guiding council.)

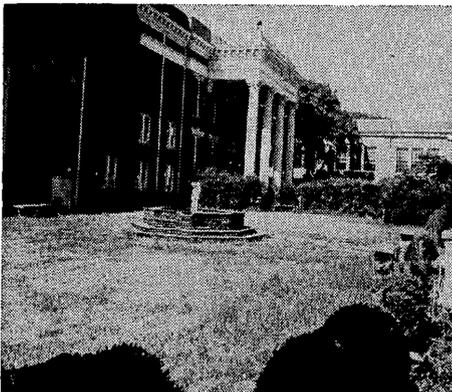

Moreover they are elected by the students and to represent students. A lot of misunderstanding could be cleared up if more students made use of this right and saw what CGA really does. The grippers aren't always a number of things our state, our country mean, however, is the do the job. It takes at that. Telling your own rules won't do Student Council.

The Seniors Celebrate And Present Last Chapel Play

From May 21 through May 25, Harvey and Bobbie Lane for the party and Dot Ward acted as the seniors put aside, for a while, best costumes. The prizes? Two term papers, curriculum reports, and outside reading and plunged into Senior Week with all the force they could muster after a somewhat exhausting quarter.

Monday was a day of preparation and anticipation. There were meetings of the various committees and there were costumes to be worked on. Then came Tuesday and Kid Day—and what a day it was! Clair Strum and Marian Roy had planned the program well, and the class of '51 found that is even more exciting to be a child than to be a senior. A birthday party was given on front campus at 3:00 and at this time prizes were given to Les Clark, Mary Quinn Johnson was in charge of the Wednesday was supposed to be set aside for a picnic supper at Lake Laurel. Of course it rained and of course the seniors had just as good a time in Sanford Rec Hall. There were hotdogs, cokes, sunbaths under the lights and records to dance by. Lois Lay and Madeline Allen were in charge of this event and saw that everyone had a good time.

On Thursday night the seniors gave their traditional party for the juniors at Sanford. Barbara Johnson was in charge of the party and Dot Ward acted as chairman of the entertainment which consisted of a talent show, the presentation of the key to Sanford to the juniors, a welcome by Neesie, and—as a special surprise—the seniors gift to their class president.

As a climax and a finale the seniors gave their chapel program on Friday. The program was based on Gordon Jenkins' "Manhattan Tower" and gave some of the thrills, tears, and memories of the class of '51. Fran Holst and Betty Palmer were chairman for this program.

All in all the week was a good one and special thanks go to Mary Lancaster who acted as general chairman.

Can you believe it! Graduation for some of the lucky ones—summer to loaf for two and, jobs for the rest. Snooping ain't the word for what I've been doing lately despite the fact that they're still giving exams this year. Seniors have been my source of advice and to show that I appreciate it my short "What's a Diplomas in Thirty Seconds" is giving out merchandise free Wednesday afternoon at five. Of course, you'll want to know the types of merchandise for your level of education.

Case I, Sanford, Room 5946—Pretty Lus Screw. I cannot bear to think of missing chapel next year. Why, the day the soft conversation man spoke, I recorded the whole thing and now I play it in my most romantic moods.

Case II, Sanford, Room .0005—Miss I. B. Crazie. Oh the dining hall meals—I just love hash and grits and if I get married I'll cook it three times a day.

Case III, Sanford, Room 1951—Tutu Much Whisk. I'll miss so many wonderful places to go on a date. Why no place in the world is like the Blue Goose not even Cairo or Copacabana. Me being a party girl, I just love ll those good old beer parties we had this year.

Case IV, Sanford, Room VDQ 5—Miss I. Q. Head. I'll miss being in class making the dean's list, Phoenix and Phi Sigma. I have already sold my left fissure to Yohan Camby who plans to graduate next year. "Why will you miss most when you graduate?" Due to high class profanity certain words will be omitted.

Case V, Sanford, Room LSMFT—Suzie Flunkum. Editors note: Due to the reputation of this chick a different question was asked. The question was "When will you ever graduate what will you miss most?" Not a d— Thing. You see that building—I built it. You see that horrible food—I made out the menu. See that—I failed he heck out of it. Go on peddle your business elsewhere. I'm printing degrees on this side of the street.

In dead seriousness Seniors—when you get to sleep late on Saturdays and your roommate gets your laundry for you—the day that special letter comes—bacon, lettuce, and tomato sandwiches in the dining hall hall—when Dr. Wells makes an announcement about what others think of us and how proud he is of us—Annual Hike and Golden Slipper Days—that crazy night you decided to peroxide your hair—A Capella's Adoramus Te in the distance—It's good to belong to GSCW and all the left side?—That's the one

Five girls and a boy, from the cave man era to the 2000 plus future, wandered over the GSCW last week as part of the annual Alpha Psi Omega initiation program. Bruce Prosser, Milledgeville, first male member to be initiated into the local chapter, other than an instructor, was disguised as "Mr. Ugh-a-Ugh" from the early Paleonic period, clothed in the skin of a wild fertilizer sack and the stump of a tree. His main project was to explain with a cave-man's vocabulary and knowledge, what lightning was. Bruce has been one of the four or five male co-eds at Jessie during two summer schools and has been working with College Theatre for the past seven years.

Mary Lu Richey, Douglas, was an actor from the old Roman stage, whose duty it was to settle a dispute between the two political factions of Rome or Jessaville. Martha has worked for only one year in College Theatre, and was a toga-bedsheet, with a crown, the only sophomore to be initiated.

History Parades In Review During Alpha Psi Initiation

Ruth Womble, Warthen, signified the "It" girl—Clara Bow, in her scanty skirt cut for deep water fishing and hip-length waist, flaunting her lengthy cigarette holder to all her screaming fans. Ruth is the third member in her family to become a member of Alpha Psi and she made up her mind to try for membership almost before she decided to come to college.

Betty Campbell, Atlanta, was the Lady Gwenevier from King's and Round-table days, seeking her lost lover, who was only a surt, but a real hen kid when it came to rescuing lovely ladies from lonely towers. B.C.—so called in real life—is senior majoring in Chemistry. She will receive her B. S. degree this June.

The six neophytes officially became members of the local cast at the Thursday night initiation ceremonies, and were further honored by a formal banquet Friday, at which Dr. Rosalee Walston was the guest speaker.

ROVING PHOTOGRAPHER

There's a photographer "operating" on campuses in the south who has a unique way of taking pictures. His subjects aren't too fond of his methods, if a notice posted in a woman's dormitory at a southern university is any proof. The notice said:

"It has come to our attention that a pseudo-photographer is operating on different college and university campuses in the Southern area. He is reported to follow this procedure:

"He calls the coed by phone, usually by name, stating that he is a professional photographer taking pictures for magazine covers and stating that the coed has been referred to him by one of her friends; he then makes an appointment with the coed, takes a few pictures, and then (without the knowledge or consent of the coed) cuts off large chunks of hair from the back of their head.

"This individual only operates on girls with long hair, shoulder length or longer. There is reason to believe that the individual may be going from school to school."

New Arrival Announced

The staff of the 1951 Spectrum has proudly announced the arrival of its 173 page annual. The blessed event took place on Monday, May fourteenth, and was officially celebrated by a party at Sanford during which Dr. George Beiswanger was presented as delectable and godfather of the product. The proud parents, Betty Palmer and Kathleen Benefield, have released this statement:

"At time we wondered if we would ever get this far. Now that the books are here, we can only hope they satisfy all those who waited so patiently for them."

Kampers Klub

If you happened to look out your window Thursday night you'd have seen a group of girls with smoke-streaked faces, tramping back from Nesbit Woods. It was Kampers Klub in full force coming back from a weekly cook-out.

During these cook-outs, Miss Vicedomini stars in thrilling deck tennis games — can't you see it? The Kapers have planned a "sleep-out" at Nesbit for the near future — mosquitoes, morning dew, and all. These girls really love the wide-open spaces. (Will the time permit their wild folly?)

Penguin Club

The Penguin Club took a vacation and went swimming. The Lake almost overran its banks at the gigantic number of these strange creatures.

You could see odd sights as these "Land-Lovers" took to the water; someone who couldn't wait — clothes and all. Louise Brown and her fins put on a wonderful show and Tubby Atwood and Olga Fallen finally won their water-battles, through the use of buckets.

The sun-burned, water-logged, bucket-bruised girls made it back to campus with no casualties — which isn't so amazing considering all the fun!

If you enjoyed the publicity for the "Pirates of Penzance" (or maybe you didn't?) you might be interested to know some of the people who made possible the entire project.

Below is a list of people (look closely, Mate; your name might be among them) to whom we remain ever grateful for their part in the success of the undertaking. Dean Hicks, for her fine cooperation, Miss West, for her patience and direction, Mr. Gore for his technical advice, Miss Tate, for lending her shells and starfish for Thomas' window display, Dr. Keeler, for lending his skulls and other odd bones for Thomas' window display, Miss Burns for being so wonderful to let us use her car to cart props up town and back for the window displays, Miss Ferguson for letting us use her antique doll trunk as our treasure chest in Thomas' Mrs. Giddings for lending us two mops to use as the Major General's epaulettes. Mrs. Engram for giving us sand for our window display, Miss Mankey and the D. E. lending us their mannequins, and letting us darken their complexions, the members of Jesters and Alpha Psi for their fine cooperation, especially the "Y" apartment and Olive — for her enduring patience with us as we worked over there, through meetings, conferences, and more meetings, Rachel Means and Betty Canady for the use of their rain boots on the pirates,

Connie Harrison and Barbara Sue Johnson for their advice about the window displays, Liz Shelton, B. C. Cambell, and Less Clark for the use of their earrings on the pirates in the window and also on the posters, Pat Wall for being our "general errand" girl, Lil Burns for the use of her candle in Sammons' window, Jane Mitchell and Moe Phillips for the use of their blue jeans for Gloria and Maureen when their own blue jeans were clothing the pirates in Sammons, Pat Mitchell for letting us use her glue up and break her scissors, Lizzie Rogers for her stapler, which made the caricatures possible, Jan Blackwell for a can of tuna fish which fortified the publicity committee for another night's work, Nick Murphy for the use of her hatchet which made the sticks stick in to ground for the caricatures, the Junior Class for the metallic "stuff" which dressed up our posters and caricatures, and we must say "thanks again" to the "Y". It was truly wonderful to have a place to spread out in and call your own.

There is also the danger of leaving out someone when thanks are being given out — however, we sincerely hope that we have included everyone; but if not, forgive us this time and accept of silent thanks.

Pirates Land In Audience's Heart Under Lead Of Starr

The Pirates of Penzance landed in full array and took command at Russell Auditorium Friday night, May 18. The comic operetta, "The Pirates of Penzance," by Gilbert and Sullivan received the hearty acclaim of a packed house of over 1,000 people.

The presentation was a colorful one, including a chorus of six—the MAJOR GENERAL'S wards—dressed in pastel organdies and picture hats; a band of ferocious (?) pirates — male and female — with their gaudy apparel and flashing earrings; a company of gallant (?) policemen in their dashing scarlet and gray uniforms. Handsome "Lenie" (Leonard Norman) was striking in the role of the heroic FREDERIC. Vivacious Jean Starr gave a breathtaking performance as the lovely and desirable MABLE—(daughter of the MAJOR GENERAL). That lovable Harris ("Cheaper by the Dozen") Rogers brought down the house with his hilarious antics. The dauntless PIRATE KING, Jim Lee, captured the imagination of everyone. The other principals gave creditable performances — Harriett Casteel as EDITH; Laura Dell Trapnell as KATE; Lewis Cox (GMC) as the POLICE SARGEANT; and Gene Oxford (GMC) as SAMUEL — one of the pirates.

REC NEWS

By Gay Pettie and Olga

Fallen (Typist — Miriam Field). Since the last Colonade of 1951 is being dedicated to the Senior Class, it only stands to reason that the last sports column should, in due recognition, be written in memory of their exploits in the world of sports.

The Seniors began their last year of sports in an all-out attempt to leave behind them a name that Jessie sports fans will long remember. When the bugle sounded ending their last Sports Day, the Seniors had chalked up their first victory on the blackboard of '51.

Next came Annual Hike, and the second triumph, as the "Wandering" Seniors "All Alone" hiked away with first place with their take-off on "Life in the Country" — or "Sanford Dead." (of course — to be sportingly truthful, there was one memory of Annual Hike, which was not as victorious, but there are now rumors that the Seniors, after a year of practice, are ready to take-on the faculty in softball again — need we say more?)

Then with fall, winter, and spring came the three major intramurals with the senior class reaching the finals in all three — the last being on a day which was perhaps more memorable than many, as dignified Seniors entered their second childhood proving that kids will be kids. The juveniles of that softball team proved to be as interesting and entertaining as their names implied, and the line-up was as follows:

The battery was "Butch" Bonnell and "Snaggled-Toothed Willie. Holding down first with both hands was "Smockey" Phillips and playing with second was a "Stinky" Pinky.

Roaming the field while stand at short was never-Miss Night with prissy "Percy" guarding third, preventing the thieves from stealing his base.

In right field pasture, catching the flies, was no less than the "Warden" of a by-gone "wreck," who was cheered by a class of bedraggled kids.

So the Kid-Day class ended their sports—play year with a long string of victories on the Jessie blackboard and left behind the name of a class recorded as great in the "history of Sports." However, much more important than the games they've won are the victories they've left in the realm of fair play — the Sportsmanship Star in their Royer Crown.

Tennis News: The tennis tournament is in full swing with most brackets in both faculty-student and student-student reaching the semi-finals. Finals in both will be played off next week with a big crowd expected to watch! (And that means you!)

Softball News: Bell Hall defeated Sanford in the finals of the dormitory tournament, and Thursday will mark the end of the class tournament with the Seniors playing the Sophomores in the finals. May the best team win!

Plans Already Underway For Religious Emphasis Week

Religious Emphasis Week may way of challenging all those, with whom he comes in contact, to do their very best to carry out the aims of the project which he feels is the most important crusade in the world of the college campus.

This summer Mr. Stoner is going to Europe to help universities there to set up Religious Emphasis Weeks such as almost every American college and university has. One college boy was so impressed with the results that University Christian Missions accomplished on his campus that he offered to accompany Mr. Stoner to Europe, paying all his own expenses, in order that he might help in the sharing of this wonderful experience with college students all over the world.

Under such inspiring guidance, the Campus Committee of Seventy for GSCW is certain of making Religious Emphasis Week, 1951, the biggest thing on campus next year.

A committee of 70 sounds like a big group, but Religious Emphasis Week, 1951, is going to be such a deeply important event to every Jessie that it will take a lot of people and a lot of planning. Mr. Stoner pointed out during his visit to the campus on Monday, May 14, that the most successful Religious Emphasis Week ever held had been planned for and worked on for two solid years by a committee of 100!

Our Campus Committee of Seventy is broken down into 11 smaller committees each having its own Chairman and Faculty Advisor. They are: Arrangements, Ruth Womble, Student Chairman and Mr. Jack Gore, Faculty Advisor; Book Display, Annette Chalk and Miss Satterfield; Breakfasts and Retreat, Rena Marshall and Mrs. Smith; Classroom Lectures, Fannie Laura Harrell and Dr. Walston; Faculty, Janet Butler and Miss Chapin; Hospitality, Martha Lancaster and Miss Vicedomini; Finance, Ruth Anderson and Mr. Aiken; Dormitory Discussions, Robbie Robinson and Mrs. Jennings; Publicity, June Netzel and Dr. Dawson; Seminars, Barbara Jordan and Miss Maxwell; and Worship, Lila Mills and Izzie Rogers.

The Campus Committee all wished that every student could have talked to Mr. Stoner while he was here. He is a man with a dynamic personality and has a

OF ALL THINGS Names In News

By June Netzel

When you hear a softly whistled tune carried across the courtyard at night while all else is black stillness you know that you can turn out your light and hop into bed assured of a safe night's rest. But it has probably never occurred to you to worry about your safety at night. It's something that we all take for granted. There is a good reason why we can take it for granted, and his name is Mr. Otis Winslette, the night watchman.

Mr. Winslette has been walking and whistling around the GSCW campus for four years now. He makes the complete rounds of the campus about a dozen times every night, putting out the lights in the academic buildings and keeping a close watch over the grounds to prevent fires and keep out prowlers. So the tired seniors who go "trudging down to Sanford" two or three times a day are way-behind Mr. Winslette when it comes to walking.

Mr. Winslette is a member of the regular city force and has been for 15 years, having been on the Eatonton city police force for 10 of those years. During that time he has always worked at night. Hmm, here we have a man who is as much of a night owl as our English teachers think we are when they assign us term papers!

The GSCW campus is a very well-behaved one according to Mr. Winslette. In fact, about the only trouble he ever comes across is caused by people who do not belong on campus. Mr. Winslette hasn't had any such trouble as did one of our former night watchmen, Tom Bragg, whose brother eloped with a Jessie while Mr. Bragg was on duty.

When I asked Mr. Winslette if he had had any such interesting experiences, he just swilled coyly and said "You don't want to hear about those." But if you ever get the urge to slip out through the fire escapes after 11:00 house-check, don't; because you'll probably find Mr. Winslette waiting for you at the bottom.

MRS. McCULLAR TO SPEAK AT COLLEGES

Mrs. Bernice Brown McCullar will be the featured speaker at outstanding programs being staged by two of Georgia's halls of learning.

This week-end Mrs. McCullar will be the principal speaker at Beesie Tift college's alumnae day program, and next week she will give the address at Homecoming ceremonies at Mercer University.

Ann Vandeventer, freshman from Washington, Ga., placed second in the "Miss Georgia" contest last week end. She won first place in the talent division with her dramatic interpretation of "Taking the Rest Cure" by Patricia Collins.

Miss Vandeventer won first place in her hometown some weeks ago, and was crowned "Miss Washington," as did Miss Carolyn Thomas, who was "Miss Sylvania."

Miss Laurie Britt, Snellville, will represent the International Relations Club at the Institute of the United Nations, this summer, June 17-23. The conference is to be held in the newly completed UN Buildings, a block of ultra-modern edifices in New York City.

Miss Britt, besides being a local member of the IRC is a junior majoring in Chemistry.

Dr. Helen Green, associate professor of social science, and Miss Elizabeth, acting chairman of the division of home economics, will represent GSCW at the invitation of the State Department at UNESCO, for a conference on fundamental education in technology for the undeveloped countries of the world, sometime this summer.

Dean Donald H. MacMahon was a judge in the Georgia State Beauty Contest at Columbus last week end, and has been requested for this same position again next year. His acceptance was not certain.

Miss Carolyn Anglin, Milledgeville senior, was seriously injured Saturday in an automobile accident near Perry. The car turned over several times pinning Miss Anglin beneath the wreckage, but rescuers arrived quickly enough to lift the car and prevent her being more seriously injured.

Her mother, Mrs. R. C. Anglin, was driving the car, but received only slight injuries and is still suffering from shock.

At the last report, Miss Anglin was able to lift her hands and arms, and her condition was reported as steadily improving.

As further proof that GSCW has the most beautiful girls in Georgia, Miss Norma Marshall placed second in her hometown beauty contest several weeks ago, and was crowned Miss Eatonton.

Comment by Mr. Jere Moore, editor of the Union Recorder and judge in the contest, said that Georgia peaches were numerous and mighty pretty down in that part of the country. (Our comment: that's just a Jessie for you!)

One of the landmarks and points of beauty on the GSCW campus is gone forever.

The tall, majestic cedars in the formal gardens were cut down and towed away. (See pic, p. 4). This garden marks the spot of the old main building — the first building on the GSCW campus, destroyed by fire in 1928.

Here were the administrative offices, the chapel, the classrooms of the old Georgia Normal and Industrial College and in the high tower on the front was the bell which called Jessie to classes back in the days of uniforms and button shoes.

The only visible sign today is the corner stone next to Parks.
