'Play It Again Sam'

Hits from the Broadway musical "Purlie" will be among the selections to be played by the Georgia College concert band at a winter concert scheduled for Russell Auditorium on Monday, March 4.

Both the college concert band and the stage band will perform during the musicale which is free and open to the public. The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

In addition to music from "Purlie", the concert band will play, among other selections, "Concerto for Two Trumpets and Band" by Vivaldi and "Pageant" by Persichetti.

NFL Week

Authentic Spanish, French, German, and Chinese food in a college cafeteria?

It's all part of a series of events with a foreign flavor due to unfold at Georgia College next month.

National Foreign Language Week will be celebrated on campus from March 31 to April 6. The event is being sponsored by the local chapter of Alpha Mu Gamma and marks the first time that Foreign Language Week has been observed at GC.

Gov. Jimmy Carter recently sent Dr. Jaime Gonzalez of the department of modern foreign languages a proclamation hailing Foreign Language Week in Georgia. Milledgeville Mayor Walter B. Williams has also proclaimed the March 31 - April 6 period as Foreign Language Week in the city.

Among the special events now being planned is an exhibit of foreign crafts and arts, choral groups and folk dancers presenting native songs and dances, a play in Spanish with English narration, and lectures and films.

The big event though is the foreign foods festival to take place in the cafeteria. Dr. Gonzalez will personally prepare the Chinese food.

A considerable amount of planning is being put into the celebration of Foreign Language Week with the executive committee of Alpha Mu Gamma mapping out the activities.

The stage band will present a number of swing and rock favorites including "MacArthur Park" and "Eli's Coming."

Dr. William Robison of the Berry College faculty and a clinician at the recent stage band workshop held at GC, will be the concert band's guest conductor and a trumpet soloist with the stage band on the night of the concert.

Robison organized the GC band when he was on the Milledgeville faculty in 1968-69. He came to GC from the Clarke County School System.

Sixty-two musicians comprise the concert band; 18 musicians, the stage band.

While rehearsing for the March 4 event, the concert band is also preparing for a March 14 performance at Disney World. A completely different musical agenda will be presented in Florida. Additionally, the band will march at Disney World, something unusual for the GC musicians, who normally do not parade.

James Willoughby, assistant professor of music, is GC band director.

Frolics Big Success

The Georgia College Choirs' dreams of the Faculty Frolics finally became a reality on Wednesday night, February 27. Mr. John Lounsbury and Mr. Linton Cox introduced the various acts which consisted of songs, dances, and skits. The faculty members that performed various bits of talents are: Mr. John Lounsbury, Mr. Linton Cox, Dr. Barter, Dr. Betty Poindexter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Shadwell, Mrs. June Britt, Mrs. Katherine Thurston, Mr. Childers, Mr. Bittick, Mr. Willoughby, Mr. Douglas, Dr. Nish, Dr. Timmerman, Dr. Wolfensteig, Dr. Kickliter, Dr. Britt, Dr. Hardagan, Mr. Bob Dooley, Mrs. JoAnne Mayberry, Mr. Jack Thornton and Mrs. Jack Thornton. These faculty members performed various acts either of the comical sense or intellectual sense form of talent. Dr. John Sallstrom and Dean Gettys deserve recognition for serving as comical fill-ins between the various acts. These two in-

Registration for the examinations must be forwarded so as to reach the Princeton Office not later than March 14.

Candidates for the area examinations will report at 1:30 p.m. and should finish at approximately 4:15 p.m., according to the time schedule for these examinations which has been set up by the testing service.

A Queen For The Day

Miss Georgia College 1973 Angie Berry, will soon give up her title to one of twelve lovely ladies competing on the night of March 30. All contestants represent different organizations here on campus, and deserve a hand of applause for the courage and determination to get on stage to perform what they do best.

Contestants are as follows in alphabetical order: Blanca Alvarez-Mina, sponsored by Alpha Pi Omega; Pat Collins, sponsored by Black Student Alliance; Beverly Dixon, sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi; Yolanda DuPree, sponsored by Black Student Alliance; Jan Foskey, sponsored by Choral Activities; Suellen Griggs, sponsored by Georgia College Band; Janie Hostetter, sponsored by New Dorm; Susan Jones, sponsored by Phi Delta Theta; Kathy Marcum, sponsored by Wells Dorm; Marilyn Simmons, sponsored by Black Student Alliance; Ann Strom, sponsored by the Colonnade; and Fran Watson, sponsored by Phi Mu.

For any great production, there have to be those "nameless souls" working lights, scenery planning activities and all those other thankless jobs that make a pageant what it is. These who have volunteered their time to help areas follow: Chairman Angie Berry, Executive Committee; Sandi Morris, Ann Hutchinson, Libby Wilson, Linda Clark, Mike Peck, Tim Ehlers, Hannah Boatwright, Tracyee Clifton, Deby Savage, Mickie Yarborough, Judy Brown, Roxanne Callahn, Andrea Pinson, Ellen Kinard, Sarah Jo Hadden, Debbie Glover, and Bruce James.

There are high hopes for the 1974 GC pageant, and with all the people working with it, the hopes will surely be affirmed. Plan to attend the evening with us, March 30.

Tour A Home

Two architecture seminars will be offered by the Georgia College art department this summer, one in Savannah and the other in Milledgeville.

The Savannah seminar, planned for June 1-9, will include visits to historic homes, churches, commercial buildings, monuments, town squares, and cemeteries in the Georgia seaport.

The Historic Savannah Foundation and Savannah State College will assist in planning the itinerary for the study programs there which will include surveys of Colonial, Revolutionary, and Antebellum architecture.

Many of the Savannah buildings to be studied are already preserved or restored to their original status. Others are in the process of restoration.

The Milledgeville area seminar, a study of the architecture of Middle Georgia, will be held from June 22 to June 30 and will feature short journeys to historic sites in Madison, Eatonton, Sparta, Sandersville, and Monticello as well as Milledgeville. The emphasis of the Middle Georgia seminar will be on architecture of the 18th and 19th century.

A number of structures in the central part of the state are considered excellent examples of the Federal, Transitional, Greek Revival, and Victorian periods.

Milledgeville was the capital of Georgia from 1803 to 1868 when Atlanta became the seat of the state government.

Both seminars will feature slide lectures, discussion periods, lectures, and library research in addition to tours.

Only 40 students will be accepted for each seminar which will carry five hours of academic credit.

Seminar participants will live in college dormitories in Savannah and Milledgeville and use the air-conditioned GC bus for touring purposes. Those in the Savannah seminar will meet in Milledgeville for the bus trip to the coastal city on June 1.

Additional information and applications for admission to the seminars may be obtained from Janice Hardy, c/o Georgia Architecture Seminar Tours, Georgia College, Milledgeville, Ga. 31061.

Laura Willoughby, a Georgia College student from Milledgeville, was the winner in the women's foil event at an extramural fencing meet with Georgia Southern College Friday night.

Robert Watkins of Milledgeville was the winner in the men's sabre division and David Taylor of Dublin won the men's epee event.

No team score was kept during the match held on the GC campus because the fencing groups at the two colleges are organized only on a club or group basis.

Antigone Reviewed

by Fred Green

Those students who missed the GC Theatre's production of Antigone last week missed a rare dramatic experience, a deeply moving, highly thought-provoking drama of a caliber that few of us in this area ever have a chance to see. However, it appears that some students were disappointed. Those spectators looking to be amused by a fast-moving plot or snappy dialogue were doomed to disappointment. Antigone is a play of the mind, a play of ideas too profound to be presented in any other way. Those students expecting flashy sets and elaborate costumes were also probably disappointed. Antigone was presented on a stage bare enough to hold the great clash of wills and ideals that comprise the play.

What those playgoers with no preconceived expectations did find was a play which illuminated the ageless conflict between moral law and political expediency. They found no stereotyped characters, no pat answers, only an intensive searching for some workable truth. The drama is all-encompassing, contrasting, human dignity with inhumane practices, appearance with reality, morality with corruption, law with disorder. The story of Antigone has never had greater power than at the present time, when moral law seems a lost commodity.

The entire cast is to be congratulated on its performance throughout the run of the play. Special applause should be given to Hannah Boatwright, who appeared as Antigone, and Martin Swinger, who portrayed Creon, and director J. Dalton Eddleman. Antigone was a triumph for the GC Theatre; those of us who saw it will remember for some time the clarion call of the tale of Antigone.

The Georgia College women's varsity gymnastics team defeated George Peabody College of Nashville, Tenn. in a dual meet held here Saturday 66.6 to 48.1.

Suzie GetItDone

Spring showers, along with messy days, bring out those beautiful flowers we all look forward to seeing pop up in our planters. However, it's a little more difficult than planting a seed and standing back to let it "Do its thing!" Even after they've grown, it's a problem to know how to care for, both in the ground and after it has been cut.

Small seedlings planted in egg shells make a perfect "home" to grow in. The egg shell halves don't cost anything and are small enough to fit in those budget apartments where space is a problem. Store the shells in their original carton and keep in a sunny spot. Later, after the seedlings grow to a substantial size, transplant into the ground, shell and all. Roots will break through and be supplied with fertilizer as shell decomposes.

Those potted plants can really be a headache when going on vacations. A way to keep them watered while away is using 3 strips of flannel. Fasten heavy object such as nail, bolt, etc., to each end of strip. With bucket of water beside the plant, put one end of strip in bucket, the other in pot close to the plant. The "wick" will carry sufficient moisture to the plant to keep it in adequately watered condition as long as the water lasts.

Cut flowers are very popular in making decorative arrangements. Always cut flowers with a sharp tool. Dull tools clog the stems and don't let the water flow freely. The stem ends should never rest against the bottom of the container or the sides. Flowers stay fresh longer in a vase if you put about a teaspoon of salt in the water. After they start to wilt, two aspirin revive it. Charcoal, too, helps in preventing decay.

If buying cut flowers, the leaves show signs of drooping before the blossoms do. Don't buy flowers with tired leaves.

Stems of flowers are very important in the beauty of the blossom. Stems should never rest against the sides or bottom of the base. Woody and semi-woody stems of lilacs, chrysanthemums, etc. live longer if the stem ends are scraped and split. Zinnias and marigolds should be stripped of their foliage. These leaves are coarse and have a pungent odor. Short stemmed flowers can be used in tall vases by extending the stems with plastic drinking straws.

It is just about the right time now to plant those glorious beauties, so get to work, and watch them "do their thing."

The "Green Monster" lies at rest!

Where Has The Green Monster Gone?

"Where has the Green Monster Gone?" What happened to our place where we were going to have a campus Marshmellow Roast? These questions and many others have been sent to the Colonnade concerning the taking down of the GC's Choir Christmas Tree. "The "Green Monster" or Christmas Tree in which the Georgia College Choir performed Christmas Carols has come down at last. The GC Maintenance Crew began in the early part of this past week taking down the Carolers' Christmas Tree. The tree will be put into storage for further usage in coming years.

Seniors Soon To Say 'Goodbye'

Many Seniors here of Georgia College will be leaving good ol' GC either to do internships or to student teach. For some, it is a sad time, and for others it is a joyous time. For those who think it is sad, they have a good reason; it might be they'll be leaving good times behind, leaving friends and they'll have to face up to the great world of ours and its many problems.

For those leaving Seniors that are happy and joyous their reasons could be that they are glad to get out of school, period; or they are glad they can go to work and make their own future.

Seniors, we want you to know that you will be missed and may memories of Georgia College never cease.

Notice

We, the staff members of the Colonnade would like to take this space to thank all of our many contributors this quarter that have sent us literature for us to publish. We also want to thank our wonderful advisors for the work that they have done. Thanks Again! Have a safe and happy SPRING BREAK!
