GC Pageant Saturday

Saturday will be a very important day in the lives of eight GC coeds. The reason? They are the contestants in the 1974 Miss Georgia College Pageant. After an entire week of nightly rehearsals, everyone's nerves are just about on end. The excitement, anxiety, and for some lack of rest, all jumbled together will make Saturday a day long remembered by each contestant.

Perhaps you aren't familiar with this year's participants. Allow me to introduce them to you.

Beverly Dixon - Home town in Dublin Georgia. She is sponsored by Alpha Delta Pi. Beverly is a junior, majoring in Elementary Education. Talent: piano.

Jan Foskey - Hometown in Swainsboro, Georgia. Sponsored by Choral Activities. Jan is a junior majoring in Special Education. Talent - singing.

Suellen Griggs - Home town in Stone Mt., Georgia. She is sponsored by Georgia College Band. Suellen is a junior majoring in Home Ec. Education. Talent - flute.

Janie Hostetter - Home town in Tucker, Georgia. She is sponsored by New Dorm. Janie is a freshman majoring in music. Talent - singing.

Susan Jones - Hometown in Atlanta, Georgia. Susan is sponsored by Phi Delta Theta. She is a junior majoring in Business Education. Talent - uneven bars.

Kathy Marcum - Hometown in

The above scene is the glowing smile of Miss Angle Berry, the reigning Miss Georgia College of 1973. The "Lucky Pierre" this year will be, Dr. David Staszak of the Georgia College Biology Department. Dr. Staszak will be the Master of Ceremonies for the beauty pageant.

Hamilton, Ohio. She is sponsored by Wells Dorm. Kathy is a freshman majoring in Physical Therapy. Talent - dance comedy.

Marilyn Simmons - Hometown in Milledgeville, Georgia. She is sponsored by GC Black Student Alliance. Marilyn's major is Special Education. Marilyn is a junior. Talent - singing.

Jo Lynn Smith - Home town in Macon. She is sponsored by Student Senate. Major undecided but is interested in Fashion Marketing. Jo Lynn is a Sophomore. Talent - jazz dance.

Now that you know a little about the girls, a short word on the people in charge would be in order. Dr. David Staszak, assistant professor in Biology, will be acting as Master of Ceremonies.

Auditors: Mr. Turner Farmer and Miss Maxine Wells. A special thanks to Miss Donahoo for the long hours she has put into the pageant.

Of course we can't forget the stars of our show, Miss GC 1973, Angie Berry, and Miss GC 1971, Deby Savage.

Because of space limitations, it is impossible to list all the people who have helped in lighting, stage props, and all those other seemingly thankless jobs. For each of you a special thanks from each contestant.

There will be a special election Tuesday, April 9, 1974, to fill the following vacancies:

Senate District	No. of Vacancies
Napier A	2
Wells	2
Bell	1
Day Students	9
Male Co-Chairman of Honor Council	1

One can petition for these positions in the Maxwell College Union on Monday, April 1, through Friday, April 5.

Mansion Makes National News

The Old Governor's Mansion on the campus of Georgia College and the Georgia capital in Atlanta have been designated National Historic Landmarks by the federal government.

The two buildings are among 17 Southern landmarks to be so designated on Sunday in Washington.

Commenting on the new honor for the old home, Dr. J. Whitney Bunting, GC president, said, "I am intensely gratified that this action has been taken by the federal government because I have long felt that the Old Governor's Mansion has occupied an extremely historic and strategic spot in the history of this nation. The Mansion has been registered with the National Historic Trust for a number of years, but this new recognition represents a further achievement for the building and for Georgia College."

The Mansion, now the home of Dr. and Mrs. Bunting, was completed in 1838 at a cost of $50,000 and was the last residence occupied by Georgia governors when Milledgeville was the capital of Georgia.

Inspired by Palladio's villa near Venice, Italy, the Mansion is considered one of the most perfect examples of Greek Revival architecture in the U.S. The exterior appearance is distinguished by its Ionic columned portico topped by a classic pediment. The most commanding feature of the interior is a central rotunda which rises 50 feet to a domed ceiling.

The outside walls of masonry, covered with stucco, have been restored to their original condition. The color of these walls was once described as "a lovely pink-tinged sunset, just deepening into crimson."

The 60-foot square building has also been described as a home that appears "to spring naturally from the red hills of the Georgia Piedmont."

Ten governors occupied the Mansion between 1839 and 1868 when Atlanta was named to replace Milledgeville as the state capital.

During the Civil War, General Sherman used the Mansion for his headquarters on his March to the Sea and it was in the old home that Governor Brown was arrested by Union soldiers.

The Mansion has been the home of GC presidents since 1890 and is open to the public except on Mondays.

A Word From Harvard

Dr. Jean Mayer, a Harvard University nutritionist who led a technical mission to war-torn Biafra in 1969 for UNICEF, will speak in Chappell Hall at Georgia College on Monday, April 1, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Mayer's lecture, free and open to the public, will be the final offering of the Georgia College Lyceum Committee for the academic year.

The Harvard professor will speak on the topic "U. S. Nutrition Policies in the Seventies," the topic also of his latest book.

Dr. Mayer was born in Paris in 1920, the son of a physiologist. He did his undergraduate studies in Paris, receiving a B. Litt. (summa cum laude), a B. Sc. (magna cum laude) and several of the highest scholastic awards in France, including the First (Honor) Prize of French colleges. He was a fellow of the Ecole Normale Supérieure.

During World War II, he served in the French Army and the Free French Forces in France, North Africa, Italy, and, after landing in Southern France, France and Germany.

He was awarded 14

decorations, including the Croix de Guerre with two Palms, Gold and Bronze Stars, the Resistance Medal and the Cross of Knight of the Legion of Honor.

After World War II, he resumed his studies at Yale, where he was awarded a Ph. D. in physiological chemistry in 1948 and the Sorbonne where he was awarded a S.Sc. in physiology summa cum laude in 1950. He has since been awarded an honorary M.A. from Harvard and M.D. from the College of Physicians of Czechoslovakia.

In 1950, Dr. Mayer joined the Harvard faculty where he is now professor of nutrition, lecturer on the history of public health, and member of the Center for Population Studies.

Dr. Mayer is well known for his research on the mechanism of regulation of food intake and the developments of experimental and human obesity. He has published approximately 550 papers and several books. The latest include "Overweight: Causes, Cost and Control," "Human Nutrition," and "U.S. Nutrition Policies in the Seventies."

Rachel Leaves On Flight Of Hope

An Air Force plane carrying four-year-old Rachel Gann left Dobbins Air Force Base in Marietta at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, bound for the Texas Rehabilitation Center in Houston and the possibility for a better life for its passenger.

Young Rachel has been paralyzed from the neck down since being injured in an automobile accident last Aug. 23. Her mother died in the accident. Since then, she has lain helpless in Atlanta's Northside Hospital, kept alive by the constant care of doctors and nurses and a respirator named "Oscar" by Rachel herself.

Despite the intensive care given Rachel at Northside, she still needed to go to the Texas rehabilitation facility. No civilian plane to take her to the hospital could be located because of the power generator required for the respirator.

A military plane would, but the Air Force has a rule against competing against commercial aviation. A call from Sen. Herman Talmadge cleared that barrier.

Medical expenses for Rachel have already passed the $75,000 mark and continue to rise.

Medical insurance, which covers 80 per cent of the expenses, will run out in August, the anniversary of the mishap.

A fund for Rachel has been established, and the Internal Revenue Service has ruled that gifts to the fund are tax deductible.

A spokesman for C & S National Bank said donations to the fund should be sent to the Rachel Gann Trust Fund, P. O. Box 48035, Atlanta, Ga. All checks should be made to the Rachel Gann Trust Fund.

Rachel's father, Douglas Gann of Canton, quit his job after the mishap to help with the nursing. Gann's brother is keeping Rachel's older brothers, Steve 9, and Greg, 11.

New Choice Possible

Georgia College now provides two types of meal plans for the students: the 10 meal plan in which you have 2 meals a day for five days a week and the 21 meal plan in which you have 3 meals a day for seven days a week. At the present time there are 617 students who use the 10 meal plan as compared to 160 students using the 21 meal plan. This shows that a vast majority either go home almost every weekend or they just don't have the desire to partake of the school's meals seven days a week.

A new meal plan might possibly come into effect during mid-summer or next fall. This would be a 14 meal plan having 2 meals a day seven days per week. This would be advantageous to a large number of students because some of the students having 10 meal plans would like to change to a 14 meal plan.

At this time no plans have been made to eliminate mandatory buying of meal tickets by students living in one of the dormitories.

This column is begun in the scheme of this administration's policy of keeping the students informed of its proceedings. It is also the hope of the Legislative branch that students will keep us informed as to the areas of concern on a weekly basis. Shortly, there will be a bulletin board erected in Maxwell Union to be used specifically for CGA information. This will be paid for by YOU, the student, from student activity funds. Hopefully, this board will take some of the pressure off the slim Colonnade staff by providing needed dispersal of information which they cannot handle.

On the CGA office window there is an office hour sheet with the hours of each CGA officer posted, and their address and telephone number. This is a subtle message that the CGA office would like to be informed of the happenings of the student body. This office is open to all students as the primary liaison between the students and the administration. However, that initial step must be taken by YOU, the individual STUDENT.

Get to know your Senator, and let him (her) know your views about things. He'll be asked every Wednesday night how you feel, and what you want, so do him a favor and let your Senator hear what's happening.

One final note, SENATE elections for the vacant seats will be announced within the next two weeks, so check the Lounge desk in Maxwell Union for petitions.

Farewell From Incumbent

Serving as Miss Georgia in Columbus for the pageant, I looked around at all the other girls and thought I didn't have a chance. Despite this, though, I kept on smiling and I did my best, "and that's what counts". "It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game." It has taken me 19 years to actually believe this saying; and I wish everybody would. It didn't matter if I thought I could win or lose, but the fact is that despite the outcome, I had won within my own self. I accomplished my own personal goals and I did MY BEST.

I sincerely say, "Best of luck", to all the girls Saturday night in the pageant. No one actually loses; everyone is a winner. I hope you know what I mean. Good luck girls! I've loved working with you!!

Colonials Take Fort Valley

Cottle Fans 17

Rick Cottle struck out 17 batters Tuesday as Georgia College Baseball Team beat Fort Valley State in the first game of the season. Cottle gave up 4 runs and 13 hits as he went the entire nine innings in the 5-4 win. Although erratic in his first College appearance, Cottle showed best when the conditions were worst. The game was a thriller beginning with Milton Gallaher scoring the first run of the game by almost destroying the opposing catcher while scoring. Although Gallaher appeared to be out, he collided with the catcher so hard the catcher dropped the ball. The Colonials then scored another run in the 3rd, two in the 5th, and one run in the 7th inning to win the game.

Hitters for the Colonials were Milton Gallaher, 2 hits, Bubba Poe, 2 hits, Bob Watkins, 2 hits, and Red Boyd, Chipper Cox, Stuart Jones, and Artie Traylor had one hit each.

As a team Georgia College had 5 runs, 10 hits, 1 error, and left 6 men on base. Fort Valley had 4 runs, 13 hits, 1 error, and left 11 men on base.

The Colonials' next four games are away. The next home game will be April 5 against tough Berry College. All home games begin at 3:00 p.m. at the Athletic Complex.

We, the 1974 Georgia College Colonial Baseball Team, would like to invite each member of the student body and faculty to all of our home games this year. We feel that the hard work during the pre-season may pay off with an exciting and, hopefully, winning baseball team. We need and want your support.

Whitman Defends Streak-

Fred Green

It has often been said that the current "streaking" movement is purposeless. Every great movement has had its important spokesman whose words embody the true spirit of the cause. The French Revolution had Rousseau; Ghandi used Thoreau's Civil Disobedience. Not to be outdone, the "streaking" movement has found its own famous proponent—Walt Whitman. The following passage is from Whitman's Specimen Days and Collect:

"Sweet, sane, still Nakedness in Nature!—ah if poor, sick, prurient humanity in cities might really know you once more! It is your thought, your sophistication, your fear, your respectability, that is indecent. There come moods when these clothes of ours are not only too irksome to wear, but are themselves indecent. Perhaps indeed he or she to whom the free exhilarating ecstasy of nakedness in Nature has never been eligible (and how many thousands there are!) has not really known what purity is—nor what faith or art or health really is. (Probably the whole curriculum of first-class philosophy, beauty, heroism, form, illustrated by the old Hellenic race—the highest height and deepest depth known to civilization in those departments—came from their natural and religious idea of Nakedness.) "Some good people may think it a feeble or half-crack'd way of spending one's time and thinking. May-be it is."

Waiting Alone

We withdraw into ourselves and begin to pity us, waiting for someone to notice us and yearning for kindred spirits to reach out and touch our lives.

But how often do we offer to make the first move toward joining our minds and hearts with others as lonely as we?

Streaking

Thru the sun And beneath the moon, Under the sky they came.

Past the meadow Down the streets, Thru the pouring rain.

Passing here, and fleeting there, Oh, the scurrying so. 'Till they all had dashed away... Streaking as they go.

WHY

The Most Precious Possession

The most precious possession I have is a Heart filled with love. Yet, our society laughs And condemns us if We attempt to show Our true feelings to Those we care to; And so, I cannot Express that contained within. But I wanted you To know, my friend, However trivial and shallow I may seem, I Love you and only Wish that everyone could find A friend like you.

Walter H. Young

IN DAYS OF OLDE, WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD, YE MEN WERE MEN AND YE WOMEN WERE GLAD OF IT!

Party time, everybody! Let's Party and get Drunk! We partied and partied, We danced the night young. We kissed in the moonlight, My new love and I. We parted; now sober, as the sun touched the sky. I laughed when I met her I cried when she left, I felt our chance meeting Was really a theft. For we stole a part of time and space, That wasn't ours, an unfinished race.

Party time, everybody! Let's Party and get Drunk! Let's dance and find new loves, While the night is still young. John Williamson

Endurance

Endurance is a tiny, invisible thread of substance; that pushes you on to meet whatever will come. Long after your will to do so has vanished.

To Keith

I spent many long hours trying and trying to find the right words or phrases to say, but they all just dwindled down to... I'm Sorry.

Interested In Fashions?

Well we are, and we plan to do something about it! To start our group off with a flair, we are having a design contest. Everyone is invited to participate.

Come to a meeting in the Conference Room in the S.U. at 5:30, Wednesday, April 3. Help plan upcoming activities.

Give till it helps.

Sincerely, Hazel Matthews

My thanks to Hazel for writing this letter. I hope there are many more students here at Georgia College who feel the same way concerning Rachel Gann.

Contributions may be made in person or sent through campus mail to box 2650. All money received will be placed in a savings fund, which when upon reaching a large enough sum will be mailed to the address stated in the article.

Dear Miss Griggs and Student Body:

The following clipping was taken from the Sunday edition of the Atlanta Journal and Constitution. I was hoping that perhaps the Colonnade would be interested in serving as a sort of collection agency for the fund mentioned. After all, it is for a good cause. I mean, we of the College, whether student, faculty, or staff, have had a chance to live and see a little bit of life and in all probability will live to see and experience much more. But this child has not had that opportunity. Can we not dig into our pockets and contribute something, no matter how small, to this fund? Surely, each and every member of the GC campus would be willing to help a little girl in such an extreme case. Contributions could be made either individually or via the various student organizations.

Bring your saddle-horse to college. There is plenty of daylight time to ride afternoons. We will provide sweetfeed, hay, grazing, and riding acreage. Call 452-5934 for additional information.

He has served as a member of the nutrition division of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), and as a consultant to FAO, the World Health Organization (WHO) and UNICEF in technical missions in various continents. In 1969, he led a technical mission to wartime Biafra.

As the chairman of the National Council on Hunger and Malnutrition in the US, he had a major role in calling the nation's attention to the nutritional problems of the poor in America.

In 1969, he was appointed special consultant to the President, entrusted with directing the organization of the First White House Conference on Food, Nutrition and Health, which he chaired. He has since served as a member of the President's Consumer Advisory Council (and chairman of its health committee) and as chairman of the nutrition division of the White House Conference on the Aging.

Previous programs offered by the Lyceum Committee this year have featured the Morehouse College Glee Club of Atlanta, Louisiana State University's Timm Woodwind Quintet, Louis Rukeyer of ABC News, and Dr. Wayne Davis, a human ecologist at the University of Kentucky.

ACS Plans Complete

Twenty-one members of the public education committee of the American Cancer Society's Baldwin chapter met recently to formulate overall plans for the year and to discuss the coming Cancer Crusade in April.

The 21 were told of the year-round role of the committee and of the goals and of the various mechanics of the April Crusade including coding and the tabulation of family questionnaires.

Speakers included Margaret Uhler, Kathy Chandler, and Martha Johnson, all of Milledgeville, and Marlene Hazlett of Athens and ACS Regional headquarters who introduced a film entitled "Chalk Talk." Mary Kent Davidson of Milledgeville was in charge of registration.

One member of the committee who could not attend the meeting was Judy Smock who was serving Streaking-Is This The End?

by Mark Smith

In the land of cotton there were two institutions known to some by the titles of the "State Hospital" and "Middle Diddle"; by these I mean Georgia College and Middle Georgia. And at these places of higher learning as strange and puzzling happenings occurred which has been sweeping the country: streaking. Now certain deans who sat positions of high esteem did turn in unbelieving shock from their windows and say, "Oh, damn, this is awful!" Their expected socialite wives did turn from their windows also—just long enough to grab some binoculars.

Georgia College
Now just what kind of formal greetings can you use when you meet a naked streaker? "How's it goin', man?" just doesn't quite cut, does it? One? How about 40? Of the "Georgia College persuasion?" You don't say "Please be seated," 'cause the grass ain't warm, buddy, not on your bare arse!"

As a slight break, though, our observatory has announced the existence of several newly discovered "moons" usually visible only from Napier dorm. These strange objects are usually seen from the hours of 11:00 to 12:00. The amazingly clear photography proves beyond any reasonable doubt their existence.

Now: for all you people who were hiding in the showers, the Tuesday night before cram day held a few surprises by way of Georgia College's introduction to streaking. Three personages of unusually stable character made a mad dash through campus, in the typical state of mind of streakers: NIRVANA.

Bright and early the next morn the Bible business reached an all time high. Two streakers zipped across front campus and one happened to stop for a copy of the Good Book! That was not the last of Wednesday's activities, however. That evening saw the emergence of the superstitious streaker. Thirteen of GC's finest made their wobbly way through our fair premises. And then the three ring act Thursday. We'll never forget that, will we now? In as hostess at a bake-off held at the new Shakey's Pizza Parlor. At the private party for contractors, suppliers, and others an unusual showing of bod, forty forthright gentlemen bared all in the noble tradition to the cries of a cast of thousands of onlookers. All for preservation of Mom's apple pie and the American way of life.

Middle Georgia

Clad in headgear ranging from the moderately conventional to the bizarre, around thirty students displayed their physiques on Wednesday and Thursday nights of the selfsame week as GC's escapades. Now, Middle Georgia streakers didn't exactly streak; most were in the well-known drunken stupor and could barely smile in the windows, much less run at top speed down a dark street. Around 11:30 Wednesday the observance of "Streak week" began. At 12:30 it stopped and turned into something like the Rites of Spring. (One dorm mother observed wryly, "Some of those guys could use some plastic surgery." I was there and I heard this with mine own ears). Primitive chants from the roaring crowd brought out the hidden Gypsy Rose Lee in at least one girl; and one guy in the crowd though to be a little less than male proved differently in a most spectacular fashion—both in response to the cries of "One for One" from the audience both above and below.

Thursday night nothing was new, really. Streaking in cars and on bicycles became the thing, though. Attracted to the scene was a few burly truck drivers who stopped in hopes of seeing a tender female, but, alas, to no avail. The proceedings degenerated into a simple panty raid and riot about 1:00, and all went home with no clothes or hard feelings.

And so after all the public (or "pubic") display ceased, certain teachers and deans did flatter the cans off the students by saying, "you only were being young, having fun, and releasing pent-up tensions which otherwise would result in etc., etc., etc." And the students were sore amazed, and said, "this is the bleeding end, man, 'cause we coulda sworn you were hauling it after some chick down on the corner. . ."

involved in getting the new business started, $66 was raised in the form of contributions to the Baldwin ACS chapter.

The Five Day Blah

by Ginny Boyer

Every student at the first of every quarter as well as the faculty hers at GC, has to aptake in the inevitable process of registering for one more quarter.

Contrary, to popular belief, our prest age of industrialization does not enhance the quaint old custom of hurrying to wait in lines outside of Parks Hall and the Library. Although the lines were not as long this quarter as they have been in previous quarters, the fact still remains that registration is still a "drag". . . drag yourself out of bed. . . drag yourself over to front campus. . . drag yourself through the lines. . . drag yourself to the dorm (or home) to collapse and wait for classes to begin the next day. To set the new quarter off with a "twist" a slight energy crisis hit the campus about 6:55 Thursday morning. Dorm residents had an instant course on "roughing it" without any electricity to heat their coffee pots and popcorn poppers and no light to see if they got the soap off their faces or wherever else it may have been. However, there is a lighter side to registration. If the daring student can survive through twelve registrations successfully, then he can be assured that he is fully prepared and qualified to stand in the UNEMPLOYMENT line a after graduation.

Reports From Washington

It's getting close to that time of year again when students start thinking about how they're going to spend their summer vacations. I hope college students who are residents of the 8th District will consider a Congressional internship among their options for the summer.

In order to provide students with an opportunity to gain experience in government, I employ two college students each summer for a one month internship in the 8th District Washington Office. The two periods of employment will be the month of July and the month of August. Salary is $500 per month.

To be eligible for an internship, an applicant must be a legal resident of the 8th Congressional District of Georgia, and have completed one or more academic years of college work by summer of 1974 with at least a cumulative C average.

Application forms are available in the President's Office of each 8th District college. Deadline for submitting applications is April 1.

The criteria used in judging applications includes participation in campus and community activities, relevance of the intern experience to applicant's future and academic achievement.

Our intern last summer was Roy Lane, Jr. of Milledgeville, a student of Georgia College. As I think Roy would be quick to tell anyone, his summer in Washington was a very valuable learning experience. Not only did he participate in the daily activities in a Congressional office, but he also had the opportunity to hear various major speakers, attend seminars on the legislative process and issues facing Congress today, attend House committee hearings and listen to debates on the floor of the House of Representatives. I hope all students in the 8th District who are eligible will apply for this unique chance to become involved in our nation's government.
