The country was all right when we tried to keep up with our neighbor, but we were a little out of the race when we tried to pass them. (The Pakistan Times)

The Georgia State College for Women, Milledgeville, Ga., November 17, 1931

Vol. 7, No. 5

Volume VII

Library Guild
An Outstanding Organization

Among the many campus organizations of this college in an outstanding one is the Library Guild. This club is composed of juniors and seniors who are majoring in English. The literary bulletin, the Lantern, is one of the outstanding journals. The officers for this year are President, Katherine L. White; Secretary-Treasurer, Ethel E. Crockett; and Social Chairman, Beth Barlow. The club maintains a large membership and is always on hand to help those who need their services.

"I think I have," said the tailor, removing the cloth with great care, "I think your yacht's wearing three years clothes."

Greets as a people have a philosophy of life that is quite different from that of Americans. Their desire is to round out human contacts, and to have an interest more in hearing about the other fellow's mortal enemies. Handshaking in personal relations is considered to be a role their habits are temperate. They show a liking for the men of this age and are seen:

"I am mad," he said, "I am mad, I am mad...."

Out of the 3172 of the class of 1932, 219 decided teaching positions. Two hundred thirty-nine candidates applied for 175, 173 positions through the office of the Alumni of the University Board. Seventy-five farms positions were registered for positions and with the exception of twenty-six, all of these were high placed, making a total placement in the teaching field of 70%.

Dr. Scott enjoys his job at the university as a guest of President Mercury and is looking forward to his future years at Mercer. He has a good time, and he is working hard for the students of the university.

National Monument To Nancy Hart Untaveled at Hartwell

Dr. Scott enjoys his job at the university as a guest of President Mercury and is looking forward to his future years at Mercer. He has a good time, and he is working hard for the students of the university.

National Monument To Nancy Hart Untaveled at Hartwell

Dr. Scott enjoys his job at the university as a guest of President Mercury and is looking forward to his future years at Mercer. He has a good time, and he is working hard for the students of the university.

National Monument To Nancy Hart Untaveled at Hartwell

Dr. Scott enjoys his job at the university as a guest of President Mercury and is looking forward to his future years at Mercer. He has a good time, and he is working hard for the students of the university.
A LETTER FROM CHINA

China is a land of many contrasts. Where the populace may be very poor, there are also great riches. Life is very difficult for the poor, but for the rich, life is very luxurious. What is the difference? It is the government. In China, the government helps its citizens. It provides education, healthcare, and other services to improve the quality of life. In the United States, the government focuses more on individual wealth and success. In China, the government is more focused on the well-being of its citizens. This is why China is a land of contrasts. There are areas of great poverty and areas of great wealth. The government plays a crucial role in this contrast. The success of the government in improving the lives of its citizens is what makes China an interesting place to visit.
Challenge in Seniors and Faculty at Harvard

"The results were quite an eye-opener," said one of the students. "I wish I had known nothing, and to start with a fresh slate. Would it be fair for me to look in another course? Would it be fair for me to look in another semester?"

The second column of the article, in the section on "American college life," is as follows: "Mr. McMullen, in the introduction to his study of college life, observes that the freshman's attitude toward college is different from that of the returning student. The freshman is more interested in the college and less in the courses. The returning student, on the other hand, is more interested in the courses and less in the college."

This statement is quoted from an article by Max McCullough for the New York Times. It is not a true reflection of the college experience, but serves to highlight the importance of perspective in college life.