Many Former Students Here For Thanksgiving Event; Home-Coming

Over two hundred and fifty G. S. C. W. girls journeyed to Milledgeville from across the nation and abroad to attend the annual Thanksgiving Home-Coming. The event was organized by Mrs. H. C. Whittaker, Director of Alumni Relations, and the University's Office of Student Activities.

Many former students reunite with current members and faculty at the Georgia State College for Women on Thanksgiving Day to reminisce and celebrate the university's history.

The performance was sponsored by the Board of Trustees and the Georgia State College at the Walthal Auditorium. The play, a detective story set in the Walthal Auditorium, features a cast of characters who solve a mystery involving the college's history.

Annual Alumni Service Is Held

Former Students Gather For Thanksgiving Service—Appropriate Entertainments Scheduled

The annual Alumni Thanksgiving Service was held at the auditorium on Tuesday, November 29th. The service included various readings and prayers from the alumni association.

Alumni Members Present Program Friday Morning

The Alumni Association of the Georgia State College for Women presented a program in chapel, Friday morning. November 29th, when many of the students were attending the Home-Coming event.

As the students and faculty entered the auditorium, Miss Maggie Pickernell, the president of the college, welcomed the alumni and faculty to the event.

After the program, alumni members were invited to attend the college's annual Home-Coming event, where they could reconnect with former classmates and enjoy the festivities.

The program was concluded by President Mrs. Alberton, who expressed gratitude for the alumni's continued support and involvement in the college's activities.
Courage and the Airedale Spirit

Lady Hamilton was the world's worst actress. Her performance was so bad that she was known as "the worst actress who ever lived." She never learned her lines and often stumbled over them. However, despite her lack of acting skills, Lady Hamilton was very popular because she had a special quality that made her unique. She always wore a black dress, and no matter how bad her performance, she would never step on a single word.

The secret to her success was her ability to make the audience laugh. Even when she was meant to be solemn, she would crack a smile and say something unexpected. This unexpected behavior earned her the nickname "La Zanni the Rope" because she could make any audience laugh silly.

Despite her lack of talent, Lady Hamilton was beloved by the public. Her performances were always a hit, and her fans never got tired of her antics. She continued to perform until her death at the age of 61. Her legacy lives on as a reminder that sometimes, even in the face of failure, one can still find joy and happiness in life.

And the audience loved her. She always received a standing ovation, and even when she made mistakes, they would still applaud her. Her performances were always a hit, and she remained a beloved figure until her death. She was a true icon of the theater world, and her legacy lives on to this day.

A Fourfold Reading Aim

"Reading should be one of those four main aims of education."

- For joy, pride, delight, or awe.
- For adventure and experience.
- For the active process of learning through understanding the text.
- For the sense of growth and personal achievement.

In the face of responsibility

Before another four years have passed and America once again is galvanized in the political campaign world, it is likely that more than a million men and women of the age in which we are living will have reached the voting age. The people of this country, but our young people, must be prepared to assume the responsibility.

This thought has been on my mind of late. I do not mean that we should rush into the political arena without any preparation, but I think that we should not be afraid to express our views. The responsibility that comes with voting is a great responsibility, and we must not take it lightly.

The time is right for young people to begin to think about the issues that affect them. The more we understand about the policies of the candidates, the better prepared we will be to make informed decisions at the ballot box.

In conclusion, I believe that we should encourage young people to vote. The responsibility that comes with voting is a great responsibility, and we must not take it lightly. Let us work together to ensure that young people are prepared to assume the responsibility that comes with voting.
