Colonnade April 17, 1934
New Students Will
On Enter April 24

Pi Gamma Mu
Election Members

NATIONAL PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT INITIATION SERVICE

The initiation service of new members for 1934 to the Beta chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, national honor society, was held Monday night at 8:15 in the college gym. Dr. Charles Elrod, national president, and Dr. George Harris, national secretary, took part in the service.

To be eligible for this society one must have completed a full sophomore year, except in arts, she must have done some work definitely in social science in the broadest sense; and third, she must have taken some course, either in the field of literature or science or the arts.

The Southern Student Conference will hold its annual meeting again this year in Atlanta, Georgia. The sub-conference of the Southwestern Section of Pi Gamma Mu, also known as members of conspicuous. She is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, Alpha Canton, Alpha Canton College, and Phi Delta Phi, Delta chapter. Dr. J. C. C. Harris, national president, will be in attendance.

The first meeting of the society will be held at 6 p.m. in the Social Science Building, and the second meeting will be held at 8 a.m. in the same building.

Local Student To Be One of Blue Ridge Leaders

Proctor's Gamble Presented
by Dramatic Club

Proctor's Gamble, a recent play directed by Catherine Maloney in a recent play written and directed by the Dramatic Club, was presented Wednesday, April 7, at the evening assembly.

The play was a sensation of the evening, and the audience gave a standing ovation to the cast. The play opened with a scene in a college dormitory, and the first act was taken up with the story of a man who is trying to get a job on the street. The play was well acted and the audience was highly delighted.

Wells to Take Office July 1

VALUABLE SERVICE RENDERED BY DR. BEESON DURING HIS ADMINISTRATION.

Dr. J. L. Beeson, who has been President of the Georgia State University for the past five years, will complete his term of office on July 1, 1934, becoming president-elect in 1935, and will be succeeded by President G. H. Crowell, who has been Vice President of the university for the past three years.

Beeson has been highly responsible for the construction of the new business building, the new science building, the new art building, and the new gymnasium. He has been a leader in the development of the university, and has been a strong advocate of the extension of the university's activities.

Dr. Beeson has been a faithful servant of the university, and has been a most valuable member of the administration. He has been a strong advocate of the extension of the university's activities, and has been a leader in the development of the university.

The administration of Beeson has been marked by the careful planning and the wise use of the university's resources.

The administration of Beeson has been marked by the careful planning and the wise use of the university's resources.
The Colonel
Published Weekly By Students of The Georgia State College for Women
C. H. Freeman and Club Sts.
McElhenny

Tragedy To Me sentinel October
1926, the last of the.

EDITORIAL STAFF
Executive Editor—C. H. Freeman, Club Sts., McElhenny
Managing Editor—Wm. R. G. Carter
Assistant Editor—J. N. W. Hembree
Scribner—J. N. W. Hembree

To Dr. Beeson

While at the University of Georgia, Beeson was an m分校 as and. Sometimes they held or more.

New Editor-in-Chie

We Wilkinson

Assistant Editors—H. H. Levan, Georgia College; Bruce Stetson.

Correction Assistant—Fannie B. Amsden

The Colonats

Preamble

At the opening of a year, the... New Editor-in-Chie

On the return of the students from the... T. W. H. Carter

We Wilkinson

The Colonats

Preamble

At the opening of a year, the... New Editor-in-Chie
The Globe Trotters

Around and around and around we go!
And we'll begin on top this week. Business conditions are still improving. Even those agents who have been against Roosevelt's plan for recovery all along are beginning to say that . . . even those agents who have been against Roosevelt's plan for recovery all along are beginning to say that . . .

The leader, as far as influence of the others that in popularity is concerned of the largest is "In His Steps," by the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Sheldon. Its circulation is given as eight million copies. It was published in 1899, and pictured what the world would be like if people happened to follow truly the teachings of Jesus. Dr. Sheldon wrote a number of other books, but none of them attained even a transitory popularity. His name appears in the general history of American literature.

For behind the leader comes a novel, as it is called in the parlance of the book trade, the famous "Frederick," by Gene Stratton Porter. Mrs. Porter has three titles among the first five and is fourth among the first eight. "Frederick" sold in the extent of two million, which was three hundred thousand more than her "Girl of the Limberlost," four hundred thousand more than her "The Homestead" and two hundred thousand more than her "Laddie." These figures enabled her to confidence by far as many who might have casually supposed to be in the leader in popularity, Mr. Bell Wright.

"Tom Horr," the book that was on the table in every parlor in the 90's, falls short of the two-million mark by only fifty thousand, but its interest circulates by that in large part in the fact that a real heroine bought an audience of one million copies and eventually sold them all for a long and seductive campaign.

Those who fancy they possess critical discrimination and sound literary taste may study the list and formulate their own theories as to the relation of artistic merit to popularity, after which they may as well have the final judgment he that incomparably essay, poetry.

—Atlantic Journal.

Beat Selling
Vs.
Best Reading

According to a tabulation recently announced by Edward Weeks as a compilation for the Institute of Arts and Sciences of Columbia University, many-five books have been published in the United States since 1873 whose total sales amount to more than half a million copies each.

The leader, as far as influence of the others that in popularity is concerned of the largest is "In His Steps," by the Rev. Dr. Charles M. Sheldon. Its circulation is given as eight million copies. It was published in 1899, and pictured what the world would be like if people happened to follow truly the teachings of Jesus. Dr. Sheldon wrote a number of other books, but none of them attained even a transitory popularity. His name appears in the general history of American literature.

For behind the leader comes a novel, as it is called in the parlance of the book trade, the famous "Frederick," by Gene Stratton Porter. Mrs. Porter has three titles among the first five and is fourth among the first eight. "Frederick" sold in the extent of two million, which was three hundred thousand more than her "Girl of the Limberlost," four hundred thousand more than her "The Homestead" and two hundred thousand more than her "Laddie." These figures enabled her to confidence by far as many who might have casually supposed to be in the leader in popularity, Mr. Bell Wright.

"Tom Horr," the book that was on the table in every parlor in the 90's, falls short of the two-million mark by only fifty thousand, but its interest circulates by that in large part in the fact that a real heroine bought an audience of one million copies and eventually sold them all for a long and seductive campaign.

Those who fancy they possess critical discrimination and sound literary taste may study the list and formulate their own theories as to the relation of artistic merit to popularity, after which they may as well have the final judgment he that incomparably essay, poetry.

—Atlantic Journal.

The COLONNADE

To Dr. Beeson:

THE COLONNADE, as official mouthpiece for the student body, faculty, and alumnae, joins these bodies in offering to Dr. Jasper Lurther Beeson a vote of appreciation for the many things he has done for the Georgia State College for Women.

We have given you our loyal support, Dr. Beeson.

You have urged that we give our loyalty and support to the new president, Guy H. Wells. This is our promise that we will do so. The Colonnade, students, faculty, and alumnae will ever work toward the upbuilding of the institution and endeavor to build well on the foundation you have laid.

The COLONNADE Staff