Ramsey has Big Ovation From Girls

Fulton High Principal enthuses that literature is his subject.

"The Value of Literature" was the subject selected by Professor R. E. Brown as the principal of the Fulton

High School for his talk before the G. S. C. W. student body last Wednesday afternoon.

"Beginning with the lines from William Wordsworth, 'Who hath a bank he built, and he may be a king indeed' Professor Rams

sey told his audience of the bountiful of literature derived from good literature and the benefits of a life-long study of the classics.

"Familiarity with the classics gives literature the power of self expression and, after all, is, as an ever growing," declared Professor Ramsey, "We find expression of our deepest thoughts to which we ourselves could never give expression."

Secondly Professor Ramsey discussed the appeal to individuality and the value of literature. "It is in the reading of good literature that our aspirations are highest and our highest ideals are reached," he declared to the audience. "Reverence in line in which he said: "Ah,

but man's reach should be higher than the clouds' if he would reach for the stars."

"The greatest value of good literature," concluded Professor Ramsey, "lies in its revelation of the fundamental things that are wrapped up in the character of man. All literature is an "The Literature is a character of character studied in great depth, the "finer" the character of Jean Valjean, the closer to Victor Hugo's Los Miserables.

Professor Ramsey next spoke of the enlargement of the understanding of our lives by a familiarity with the solutions of the characters of Scott, Dickens, and Shakespeare.

"Of all Shakespeare's characters," Professor Ramsey told his audience, "the one who grizps us most is dear great Harry of Verona."

A Spot of Beauty

It has been the aim of G. C. S. W. during the past year to add gradually several new groups. The issue got under way and the most attractive was the Formal Garden. During the past month this group has been established. The garden itself is primarily the brainchild of the Madeline Innis, and its development has been greatly facilitated by the contributions of students. The garden is the result of the hard work of several students and the supervision of the Madeline Innis. The garden is a place where students can relax and enjoy the beauty of nature. It has been a great success and has become a popular spot for students to spend their free time. The garden is open to everyone and is a great place to unwind and take a break from the stresses of college life.

The student was asked to leave the library and was given a warning. This is the second incident of smoking on campus in the past week. The administration is working to enforce the smoking policy and to prevent future incidents."

Absence-Minded Prof. Comes to Terms With Students

Another year has come and gone, and the students have come to terms with the absence-minded professor. The professor was absent for a week, leaving the students to fend for themselves. The students were able to cope with the situation and were able to learn from it. The absence of the professor was a good reminder of the importance of self-sufficiency.

The Tea Room

"Come, eat, and have a good time," said G. C. W. Where? The tea room—and why. The reasons are numerous. The tea room is an attractive division of Bell Hall, and it is open for student use. The girls entertain their friends and have their teas in the tea room. A good drink is necessary to the day, but to the tea room for it. In the tea room, the atmosphere is pleasant and the room is five cents. Occasionally special snacks are served for ten and fifteen cents. Sometimes the.college quartette furnishes music. If they don't have it always, anyway.

The tea room is opened every day from four to six o'clock.
