ELIZ. GARBUTT CHosen AS HEAD OF FROsh CLASS

Elizabeth Garbutt, Albany, was elected president of the freshmen class last Saturday at the Christmas "head" held under the supervision of the officers of the student government association. Serving with Elizabeth Garbutt as class officers will be Virginia Foxton, Griffen, vice-president; Mary Sheppard, secretary; Lily Silky, Griffin, treasurer; Calen Beavers, Dean, representative to student council; Emily Williams, delegate, representative to the state association executive board.

Elizabeth Garbutt is a member of the advertising staff of the Colonnade, and served as houseman manager of the freshman class production in the golden clipper contest. Her sister, Marjorie, was a member of the freshman class last year.

Virginia Foxton wrote and di-icted the freshman production in the golden clipper contest. Directed by Mr. Fall and reality, the clipper was representative of her class.

Merrill Arthur was another of the high scorers in all the freshmen classes. He was chosen as an "intern." reporter for the Colonnade.

captains in charge of the intercollegiate league and is sponsored by the Recreation association.

girls Represent

146 Countries

From San Francisco to New York, foreign students from 146 countries of the world have graced the campus of the Georgia State College. In an effort to report here from the students, 150 of the 159 countries of the state are represented here and the average attendance is 100.11.

Fannie and Barbara are two with 81 students each and DeCoff is second. Obviously the Atlanta girls didn't have the time or the energy to go to the city to this small country town for their education.

The enrollment figures reveal that 460 students were from states different from those of the state. Edisto and the state of Georgia are the most common ones.

Students Hear

Frost Lecture

At Agnes Scott

A large group of students and faculty members went out in Atlanta Thursday afternoon to attend the lecture given by Robert Frost, entry to the poetry of the newspaper, which was given at Agnes Scott college. Following the lecture, Mr. Frost was the guest of honor at a reception to which he was invited by the students.

Phillips Kolum

It is killing me—after years of being a writer, I have found myself writing stories about death and destruction. I have tried to escape it, but it always comes back to me. I have tried to write about other things, but they always end up with a death or a near-death experience. It is as if I am cursed.

I have tried to write about love and happiness, but it is always overshadowed by the darkness. I have tried to write about nature and beauty, but it is always marred by the despair. I have tried to write about hope and redemption, but it is always stained by the hell.

the love of a mother, but it is

pain of losing her. I have tried to write about the love of a father, but it is always marred by the depression.

the love of a child, but it is always stained by the suffering.

the love of a friend, but it is always marred by the loneliness.

the love of a stranger, but it is

horror.

the love of a pet, but it is

death.

the love of a enemy, but it is

hatred.

hatred.
