"Miss Posture" To Be Chosen November 30

The selection of "Miss Posture" on Saturday night will bring to a close the week of activities sponsored by the Recreation and Physical Education Department. Representatives from all campus clubs and organizations will be present for the contest of "Miss Posture." Each day, some phases of good posture will be stressed, and postures will be placed on the respective tellers of the mental feature of the day. On Monday, the focus will be on holding the head and chin up; Tuesday, the eyes will be on the shoulders held high; Wednesday, the peak of the profile will be held in straight feet; and properly distributed weight will be rotated on Friday.

Representatives from all organizations will be given ribbons on Monday or which will be written the name and the organization that they represent. They are asked to wear the ribbons through the week.

On Saturday night, the presentation of the prize to "Miss Posture" will be on page 2.

History Club Holds Meeting

History Club was held on November 15th in the History Club room. The minute for the program was a study of the countries of Latin America. A discussion on efforts to return the nation to the League of Nations in relation to Ethiopia and Italy. The following girls led discussions on the subject: Frances Night, Marguerite Jenkins, Dr. Keil, and Mary Letten.

Noahs Give Recital of Hines' Songs

The songs and recitation at Mrs. Hine's program were featured in the recital given on November 12th by the auditorium. Mrs. Hine's program was written as a hobby for her two grandchildren. It was written by Mrs. Hine when she was quite young, and were set aside as a way to make songs for the two new children. Mrs. Hine's program was written as a hobby for her grandchildren.

The program consisted of a series of songs by the best of Mrs. Hine's original compositions, all of which were selected by the audience. The words of the songs were: "Oh! "Do I Love You" and "I Only Know" were written by Mrs. Hine when she was quite young, and were set aside as a way to make songs for the two new children. What's In A Name?

It doesn't take much to push the limit of a name to the breaking point. It doesn't take cleverness to fool people about your ability to do so. It doesn't take any kind of capacity to push a boundary. The difference is that every time you push a boundary, you push against something that you have probably never heard of before. It's not the same, however, from the other side. It's not that the boundaries are more easily crossed. It's just that there are more ways to cross them.

In other words, if a person can have two names, then there must be at least three in this world.

There are, of course, many stories about the matter as complicated as this one could find. But there is no story that, in the same way, could find a place in the world in which, particularly when these two names are members of the same system, and are not also names, that we should have the opportunity to cross them.

So many famous reports have been known to cross from one place to another in quite different ways. And it is well known that some of these are of this sort, in which the system, which is a systematically ordered one, the Oregon State College for Women, is the only one that can exist without a name. And there is another school at Valparaiso, which is a completely ordered one, the University system.

It is difficult to understand how such a situation—such a strain of two systems, each of which is so completely ordered in our own terms—can be imposed upon the shared, and then merged with the structure of the University and the general order of our society.

End of the Nature of a Name.
Junior Week Featured By Comic Opera

New appreciation for the Junior class is evident as a result of Junior Week which ended Sat-day afternoon and featured the school's famous comedy club, The Camp- us. The evening started with a formal dance, attended by the entire student body, at which the students were dressed in their best clothing. After the dance, the members of the Junior class performed a series of skits and comedies, which were met with great enjoyment by the audience. The finale of the evening was a musical number, directed by Mr. Booth, which received enthusiastic applause from the crowd. Overall, Junior Week was a success and a great way to celebrate the achievements of the Junior class.

SPORTS

All this week, be sure and notice the girls with the Special Club cards on their clothes. They are the patriotic representatives and will be trying to sell sit them and stand correctly, so be sure to keep up with them. After all good posture is in order for the Booster Game Thursday. Of course, there will be a few fun ones. All the friends will have been known too and probably be back at this game. Come on out to the game and see the girl your are looking for.

Have your eye on the Booker Game Thursday? Oh it will be such fun. All your friends will have been away from here and probably be back at this game. Fran B. Stone of the booster club says that although both teams are good, it will be a close one. The Booster Club has the upperhand. But we shall see. All of you that have been away this week will be glad to hear that Hillsboro will be on the Campus Thursday and will probably be home for this exciting game.

That fall and winter have decided to really start, you'll find lads doing more things. The weather perfect for skiing? From now until Christmas there will be two games a week. Watch the bulletin boards for announcements for these afternoon afternoons on and out and exercise. If you are already developing a case of the "28 T" then always help some.

Just because its getting cold is no reason to think that you had better not go swimming. If you don't keep in practice the swimming will be out of shape. You will have to start all over. Don't let the weather keep you out of the pool. The building and the water are both ready, so enter it now.

Any afternoon is a good one for a bath. If you've forgotten how to get your old rusted rustle (or sorrow your crookedness) and ev-
