The members of the class attended the dinner given at Emory by the Georgia Section of the American Chemical Society, with William Haylo, who spoke at Dinner McMillan Auditorium Friday night.

Dr. Hale's lecture was a part of Mr. Emory College. He outlined what chemistry meant in the future to human destiny in an address on "Prosperity in a Test Tube." Mr. Hale was a former employee of the Soviet Union, a product of the possibilities of chemistry. He spoke of the "fearful" movement to prevent the principles of science from failure.

Saturday morning the party went to LaCrosse where they were entertained by the G. C. S. of Emory. They spent the day on a field trip looking at the geological formations and the soil erosion in the area in the same county. The group is going to Warm Springs and to see the mineral collection there. They will return to the campus late Sunday afternoon.

Movie Idea of Newspaper

Office Shattered by Visit

By BONNIE BURGE

Given, a movie version of a newspaper office; typewriters thumping at a frantic rate on the desk, reporter scurrying in and out, a fresh-faced hooded and unscrupulous reporter. A fashion-plated girl reporter. The door opens to no sumers.

The history of our movie began when an idea occurred to those in the offices of the Chicago River, a managed newsroom. It was the inspiration of a woman. Typewriters thumped occasionally, but papers were not sent with enough dispatch and interest in society. The newspaper was shaped and altered on the conscience of the society of the time. The newspapers were written in a flow of the newspaper with so much importance that it was a matter of pride. These newspapers were being typed out of page and sent to the editor's office.
