State Legislators Are Commanded By Governor-Elect

"I believe that the incoming administration is the best friend to the teachers in this state and the children in this state," said Governor-Elect E. D. Draves in an address made here on January 8 as part of the dedication program of the new dormitory, Beeson Hall, with the first session of classes now underway. The members of the General Assembly spent Friday in Millersville inspecting the state facilities here. After a ceremony opening the session, the assembly left at the old High School building leaving the new part of the Georgia Military College. The members of the assembly were visiting the State Hospital.

The legislators were entertained on the campus of G. C. S. W. in a reception in the recently constructed dormitory for the new dormitory.

Following the invitation by Gen. J. T. Thompson, pastor of the Millersville Methodist Church, Members J. E. Brinnell, Beeson-Elect of the fourteen district introduced the governor-elect.

Phrasing his administration as a means of providing a "full and complete support of the educational program," Governor-Elect Draves voiced with pride of providing adequate salaries for the teachers of the state to remedy the long building program, the large numbers of the teachers receiving the program of the Georgia Education Association, Mr. Draves expressed his approval of extending a system of compulsory attendance for teachers and committed his administration to the support of the project.

Dress Parade

Presumably the only thing the dresses should aim to be is to tread a path between good taste and what people consider as good taste in clothes. However, we are not to assume that to own a dress is simply a matter of getting something made, or buying a cheap one, and trying to make it look as good as possible. The dresses should be designed in such a way that they will blend in with the general scheme of things, and not stand out as a part of the crowd.
