1-30-1937

Colonnade January 30, 1937

Recommended Citation
http://kb.gcsu.edu/colonnade/249
PUPPETEERS TO PERFORM HERE MARCH FIRST

Night Performance Will Be Student Lyceum Number

The Olver Street Men's Club, of Las Vegas, have been booked for prize party for G. C. W. on Monday, March 1. The program will include several modern songs and several burlesque and comic turns. The company is said to be one of the largest ever to travel on the road. Also included with special lighting and sound equipment which make the performances visible and audible to the audiences in the largest halls.

The marionette group are from eight to 12 feet tall, and are made in the image of popular movie stars such as Shirley Temple, Woody Wood- chuck, Mary Loy, Max West and "Corky". In addition to "Heck Flask and Tom Sawyer," a marionette "Con- servative," will appear at the evening performance of this marionette group. The program will include "Harlequin Lullaby" and "The Seashore Fantasy." Among their other numbers will be "Men on the Flying Tramp," Ballet, as well as "St. Vitus, and "Making a Merry." The afternoon performance will be given to the students of the campus, while the evening performance is at the benefit of the student members ad

Red Cross

G. C. W. opened its pool and contributed $500.61 to the pool funds. This amount, although smaller than that of previous years, is still significant and represents the continued interest of the students.

The students, offered $10,000, stated that it was their interest and realization of the suffering. The faculty and undergraduate girls made up the remainder of the contribution, $513.50.

Collegians to Give Glee Club Concert

Mercey To Present Chorus and Band

Presenting a program which will include chorus and orchestra, The Student Glee Club and the Student Band at the performance of this evening. The program will include "Glee Club" and will conclude with a concert of the college band. The performance is free and open to all students.

Scintillating Skinner Is Skilled In Sketches

By MARY KETTELY

If you mix all the expressions you have heard about Cornelia, Miss Skinner, and you will find that three of them have a habit of blending together in a common opinion of her.

The most striking feature in the public life of Miss Skinner is her ability to make all changes on the stage. Although, in the not too distant past, she seemed to have the gypsy of every other character in her repertoire, her imitations were indeed very good, and seem to come easily naturally.

"Homework" and "Home's Due" probably could not be so closely followed by the campus as the "Miss Skinner" and "Home's Due" as they are commonly known.

But more interesting than the public life of Miss Skinner is her ability to think and to feel. Recently, one of the favorite quotations of Miss Skinner was a line from the play "Romeo and Juliet" which she could finish laughing at some extraordinary personality. Her ability to catch a word is second only to her capacity to catch a word. Her women characters were distinctly different from the men, and the men's characters were equally distinct from the women. Miss Skinner's "Punch" Miss Skinner's walk and smile needed to be noticed by the fellow students. Miss Skinner's real dramatic abilities were best portrayed in "Afternoon." She made the audience feel the emotions of the scene as though she were really living.

Most students do not like to be imitated, but Miss Skinner gave it such an air of life that they liked it. She was a perfect imitator, and her ability was beyond comparison with that of any other students.

By LUCY CALDWELL

"Like a preacher forgetting the Lord's prayer" in Miss Skinner's idea of how she felt when she forgot her own sketch.

And she does forget. Miss Skinner's voice has been described as a melodious, but not very articulate, voice that is often lost in the reverberations of the auditorium. But Miss Skinner is not the only one who has been known to forget her lines. Miss Skinner is known to miss her cue, and to forget her lines altogether.

But more interesting than the public life of Miss Skinner is her ability to think and to feel. Recently, one of the favorite quotations of Miss Skinner was a line from the play "Romeo and Juliet" which she could finish laughing at some extraordinary personality. Her ability to catch a word is second only to her capacity to catch a word. Her women characters were distinctly different from the men, and the men's characters were equally distinct from the women. Miss Skinner's "Punch" Miss Skinner's walk and smile needed to be noticed by the fellow students. Miss Skinner's real dramatic abilities were best portrayed in "Afternoon." She made the audience feel the emotions of the scene as though she were really living.

Most students do not like to be imitated, but Miss Skinner gave it such an air of life that they liked it. She was a perfect imitator, and her ability was beyond comparison with that of any other students.

By LUCY CALDWELL

"Like a preacher forgetting the Lord's prayer" in Miss Skinner's idea of how she felt when she forgot her own sketch.

And she does forget. Miss Skinner's voice has been described as a melodious, but not very articulate, voice that is often lost in the reverberations of the auditorium. But Miss Skinner is not the only one who has been known to forget her lines. Miss Skinner is known to miss her cue, and to forget her lines altogether.

But more interesting than the public life of Miss Skinner is her ability to think and to feel. Recently, one of the favorite quotations of Miss Skinner was a line from the play "Romeo and Juliet" which she could finish laughing at some extraordinary personality. Her ability to catch a word is second only to her capacity to catch a word. Her women characters were distinctly different from the men, and the men's characters were equally distinct from the women. Miss Skinner's "Punch" Miss Skinner's walk and smile needed to be noticed by the fellow students. Miss Skinner's real dramatic abilities were best portrayed in "Afternoon." She made the audience feel the emotions of the scene as though she were really living.

Most students do not like to be imitated, but Miss Skinner gave it such an air of life that they liked it. She was a perfect imitator, and her ability was beyond comparison with that of any other students.
The Meaning of Optional

BY A. J. HEBBERT

A college student who is given the privilege of optional courses would probably say that he would like it, and that would be the end of it. However, if that student were to examine the situation a little more closely, he would no doubt be discouraged by the fact that there are no course requirements in his elective subjects.

Optional courses are a privilege in the college but, as such, it is not a privilege. It is the right of every student to select courses that will best fit his individual needs. It is not a right of the student to decide what courses should be taught but rather a right of the college to decide what courses should be offered.

The first amendment to the constitution of the United States guarantees the right of the people to freedom of speech. This freedom is defined as "the liberty of the people to speak, write, and publish their thoughts, sentiments, and opinions, without restraint, and to have those thoughts, sentiments, and opinions heard, without interference, by any other person or person." (The United States Constitution, article 1, section 6.)

Dress Parade

The parade of the first amendment to the constitution of the United States is known as the "American Revolution." The "American Revolution" was a military conflict that took place between 1775 and 1783. It was fought between the American colonies and Great Britain.

The parade of the first amendment to the constitution of the United States is also known as the "War of Independence." The War of Independence was a military conflict that took place between 1775 and 1783. It was fought between the American colonies and Great Britain.

The parade of the first amendment to the constitution of the United States is also known as the "Revolutionary War." The Revolutionary War was a military conflict that took place between 1775 and 1783. It was fought between the American colonies and Great Britain.

The parade of the first amendment to the constitution of the United States is also known as the "American War of Independence." The American War of Independence was a military conflict that took place between 1775 and 1783. It was fought between the American colonies and Great Britain.