The most important question of the day is that regarding our collection to world affairs. At a general war breaks out, could we make peace in the United States? And now, while the stage seems to be closing at a general war, we still stand and hope, without being able to say, if, or if, that we can safely and quickly on our own.

From the time of Washington our political foreign policy has tended to run in two opposite directions, the one leading toward isolation and the other toward participation and cooperation.

As American isolationists, perhaps a majority of the American people have and still be feeling that we, for standing on our own continent, and establishing a new type of government and Institutions, have contributed to make itself clean and purified. They feel that the rest of the world is usually lagging behind in its institutions, despoliation, and that we should not sell our hand or lend it by getting on a diplomatie or leaf with old world standards. What we have been fighting for was to establish our nations' nation's position in the world, and to which end we must cooperate with the rest of the world, we always stand on a great list of great world questions and which we should act on such form as to bring our own to power to prevail throughout the world.

Both groups would avoid participation in war. The first would have the nation alive while the nation is living up in the world, and the second would try to stand alone after war begins. They would probably consider the shipment of arms to the Allies engaged in war and even so to place a blockade of foreign trade if necessary. The American congress has maintained the same position for the last several years. Annually for the last two or three years Congress has been trying to bill abolishing the shirk of war because it is too strong to prevail.

However, President Roosevelt startled the world in his Chicago address of five days ago, an address to the importance of which is the main reason why the United States is interested in the conduct of the war, and that we could not stand alone at sea and see the nations rushing headlong into martial conflict. The President's speech was followed by an announcement from the Secretary of the United States that the United States would send representatives to a nine-power conference whose purpose was to cooperate European differences.

This section of the executive department is regarded as being in contradiction to the neutrality section of the government and a number of rumors are going about that a settlement is to be spoken up before war begins. If we line up with any group of nations to take a positive stand on any of their issues, we will certainly have to face the consequences of any of our decisions. This is, of course, the American people plan to do.

If our participation succeeds and if war is over, then we will have made an honest a plan of action, it is certainly appreciated since our failure to rally to the League of Nations Covenant.

Tickets for faculty members for the series of college entertainment are now on sale. The tickets, which are $2.00, include all of the numbers offered on the entertainment, and it is well to note that if admission is taken up at the door, extra students will be charged $2.00 for each performance. Students are not required to buy tickets, since they must pay for their entertainments in their registration for the semester. Student participation is taken in the registration card.

The cast, which includes six different characters, often opportunities for the talent of many different people on the campus, will give the following performances in the coming year: Artemis, Hermes, Dionysus, The Tyrant, The Fakir, and The Bridegroom. The plays will be given on different dates as announced by the Censor Committee.

The ticket office will be open in the morning during the week and in the afternoon on Sunday.

ON THE BOOK SHELF

Keyhole Kitty

Miss Marie and Miss June Wood

In' the old days, when the faculty still wore red coats and tails and the students were seen (well, mostly students) in the streets, on the campus, and in the hallways, a book was deemed worthy of reading if it could be found in the library. In those days, the library was a place where one could find books on a variety of subjects, including literature, history, and science. Today, the library is still a place where one can find books, but the subjects covered are much broader and more diverse. Despite the changes in the library, one thing has remained constant: the love of reading.

DRESS PARADE

This year the dress parade is being held on the lawn at the front of the college, just as it was last year. The parade will consist of a group of students who have been selected to wear different types of dresses, ranging from simple dresses to elaborate gowns. The dresses will be displayed on a model who will walk in front of the group, and the audience will be encouraged to vote for their favorite dress. The winner will receive a prize, and the dresses will be displayed in the library for the rest of the year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

This week's letters to the editor are focused on the dress parade. One letter is in support of the parade, while another is against it. The letters are written by students who are both in favor of and against the parade. The students argue about the benefits and drawbacks of the parade, and the letters provide a useful opportunity for students to express their opinions.

TREASURE CROSS

Gold Peter was educated on the Treasure Cross, the name of the campus newspaper, and he is a member of the staff. He has written an article about the history of the newspaper, and it is available in the library. The article is written in a journalistic style, and it provides an interesting look at the history of the newspaper and its role in the college community.

FESTIVAL ENTERTAINMENT

The festival entertainment is being held on the lawn at the front of the college, just as it was last year. The entertainment will consist of a group of students who have been selected to perform, ranging from simple performances to elaborate shows. The performances will be displayed on a stage, and the audience will be encouraged to vote for their favorite performance. The winner will receive a prize, and the performances will be displayed in the library for the rest of the year.

Jasper, Of 17 Enns, Comes To Sad End

Jasper is dead. Those who knew him will have been taught to love him through his talent for making people laugh. It is said that he was very fond of his pet bird, a canary, and that he used to sing along with it. It is also said that he was a very good pianist and played the organ in the church where he was a member.

Governor Rivers Officially Opens Middle Ga. Fair

Governor E. D. Rivers addressed an enthusiastic audience Tuesday afternoon at the fairgrounds of Milliganville, officially opening the Middle Georgia Fair.

In his talk, Governor Rivers described President Roosevelt as making every effort to advance agriculture and otherwise help the farmers, and his program is the only one of resolution for the soil problem.

The governor presented Roosevelt's statement to the Senate and the nation, and the Senate has shown himself to be keenly interested in the problems of the farmers.

The governor's chief executive and legislative support is that the state is making progress more quickly than any nation in the past, through the influence of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Jasper was a man of great ability and had several more duties for his own personal appointment. His last book is "A Handful of Cotton," which is much in demand.
