State Leaders To Attend Dedication

General dedication of four new buildings on the G. S. W. campus will take place on Wednesday, December 14, with Governor E. D. Rivers and the members of the General Assembly present.

Dr. Dave Wells, president, announced Thursday that plans for the occasion were not yet complete that the dedication date had been definitely set with the Governor, members of the Legislature, the Board of Regents, and Chancellor S. V. Standefer of the University System who are expected to attend.

The dedication is to be sponsored by the college, other local institutions, and the Kiwanis, Rotarians, and Jaycees.

"The Governor has verified the date for the dedication and will, in all probability, spend the day at the college," said Dr. Wells yesterday.

While here the legislator will visit the other state institutions also. Dr. Wells said that a banquet and dance were being planned for the occasion under the auspices of the sponsors.

The new buildings to be formally dedicated are the new music building, the new physical education building, and the new physics schola.

Knox Elected C.G.A. Corresponding Sec'y

Pam Rake, sophomore twome-girl, was elected Corresponding Secretary of College Government at the Student Government elections held Monday night, at 7 o'clock in the auditorium. Students were present in the absence of Mark McDowell, president, Groce Clark, Chairmen of the Judiciary, officiated. Less than half the student body was represented.

Pam Rake will fill the vacancy left by Charlotte Howard's resignation in the early part of the school year, when Charlotte was elected Vice-President of College Government.
Selective Admission Would Solve Campus Problems

Two improvements that undoubtedly would be beneficial to the school as well as to the students are limited enrollment and two-ylp courses. The two all failed together noticeably. If one that were accomplished the other would follow.

For several years there has been a great student demand for those courses, but until now everybody has agreed that they should be done—and then left them undone.

The matter of selective enrollment is a difficult one. For a student who would suffer from lack of a college education or benefit from one, but not both, it is a matter of priority. It is not a college level of thought. A system of selective enrollment is feasible and under-lyp, but one of the institute's duties to the other students who demand would push a higher level than is possible under the present system. Over and above this, it is unfair to allow pain to waste money and allow pain to waste time in the attempt to direct a college education for those who are from the outset, obviously unable to benefit from college work.

The presently low level of scholarship at G.C.W. is, in part, the result of an unselective system. The instructors must push their instruction to a subsistence level in order to get a certain number of the girls who are relatively at a lower economic status but at a higher level than is possible under the present system. This is to say that many of the girls who are making a pressure at their own economic status are being trained as if they were making a pressure at a higher level than is possible under the present system.

A system of selective enrollment would allow the students to be selected according to their ability. Conditions would become insensibly improved when under-lyp three and sometimes four would have to share the same room. It is impossible to think of a situation where a student in a room where there are two other students, for example, is not being educated to have three people likely in one small-lyp room with only two windows. It is impossible to think of a situation where a student in a room with three other students is not being educated to have three people likely in one small-lyp room with only two windows.
