Youth's Standard Is Higher, Said Overton At Institute

By BILSEY ARTHUR

"The standard which youth has set up for itself is much higher today than ever before," stated Mrs. Grace Shan Overton, Mrs. Overton, well-known authority on women's relations, during the dress week and discussions for the Institute of Practical Relations, patronized by the YWCA. She expressed the thought that through all the years of progress, women have not followed in the prompt generation, she finds to-day, she associated with young people all over the United States and Canada, that they are judging their problems with thoroughness and reason.

Mrs. Overton stressed the importance of appreciating the psychoanalytic part of the situation in the relationship, with much thought.

She pointed out that models enjoy the company of boys girls, but they find that they are often criticized, as such. She said that when a statement is unkind it is because the woman herself is出てくる in the story. By discussing every problem with frankness and clarity Mrs. Overton impressed her audiences with the seriousness of the situation which they must have some time face. She told the students that in order of these girls who had formed a basis for philosophy of the Institute's committee would be able to have enjoyable relationships with men and wom-

Reserve Books
The reserve room of the library is filled with books that must be used by a large group of students. The books are put on reserve due to the fact that few students would have access to them if they were checked out of the library.

These books serve the purpose of textbooks for many courses. They must be used during the whole term and the number sought in the fall is considered sufficient for all those classes which have been found missing. The library had not felt that a large enough number of students were gathering them as annually large members of the books are missing.

If a book is taken from the room, another girl may be held responsible for sending assignments that are due. For reserve is given equal opportunity to study in the room. The social science and English students have more books than the physical or mathematics students. The reason is that there are two more books between the English and the social science students. These classes have been held forward in time.

There is one book, which ever is open to the reserve room, and which the reserve room is shut to the public. This is the book "The World of the Gods" by J.B. Bury.

Rental Books Added
To Regular Library
The rental library is established to increase the circulation of books that have been circulated. The rental books are reserved in the reserve room and can be taken out for a specified time. The rental books are returned to the reserve room after the specified time. The rental books are not available for anyone to take out.

Could Sign Help?
DO NOT DESTROY - the words written on signs hang on dormitory doors last year. These signs were intended to be used by students when they wished to study in their rooms very quietly and unobtrusively.

The signs were a good idea, but they were ignored.

During the discussion on scholarship, the campus was found to be a closed forum that these were few places on the campus to study. It was said that the dormitories had a lock and the students had no place to study for free for all students could not be used for study.

The freshmen have study halls at night and the upper classes have study halls on the weekend. It is evident that the students study in the dormitories and the study halls during the day, but it is that one place where they can concentrate.

It is believed by many students that if the DO NOT DESTROY signs were used again this year, the scholarship would be more attractive to the dormitory halls or not. Most of the dormitories are supposed to observe quiet periods in the dormitories, but though that she will not be interrupted several times during the day. The library is open for study from 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. during the day, but that is the only place where one can concentrate.

Saddle Oxford Compares
Lowly Sell to Humans
By GENNER RAY
In the Saddle Oxford Compares-Lowly Sell to Humans, a book written by Genner Ray, the main argument is that the human species is not as superior as they believe themselves to be.

Ray argues that horses, who are often viewed as lowly species, are actually more intelligent and capable than humans in certain aspects. He points out that horses have a more advanced social structure and communication system compared to humans.

The book also discusses the historical context of the relationship between humans and horses, highlighting the significant role that horses have played in human history and culture. Ray emphasizes the importance of respecting and appreciating the智慧 and contributions of all species.

Overall, the book challenges the common belief of human superiority and encourages a more inclusive and compassionate perspective towards other species.
