Times Have Changed

Not too long ago college was thought of as a place which was only for girls, only for college students of a certain age, but now it’s a big deal for anyone and everyone. It is considered to be rather crude from the rest of the world.

And somewhere along the line, this opinion is changing. The world is different now. People have more options, and college is no longer considered to be a necessary part of an education.

How about us? Is it really that hard or that different? Our lives are not that different from the lives of our parents. We are all college students, and we all want to go to college. We all want to get an education, and we all want to learn something new.

Students And Chapel Programs

We understand that colleges are uncovering now about more student participation in chapel programs. The proposal is not to do away with chapel programs, but to make them more interesting and relevant to the students.

The question was answered

In the last issue of The Colonnade, there was an article titled "Ask the Audience." This article asked the students what they thought of the chapel program. It seems that most of the students thought that it was not very interesting.

Now we see a different view. We see that there is a need for chapel programs. The students want to participate in them, and they want them to be more relevant to their lives.

Jennie Tyler, a senior from Kansas City, Missouri, said, "I think chapel programs are very important. They help us to see the world from a different perspective and to learn about other cultures."

Jennie Tyler is not alone in her opinion. Many other students feel the same way. They see the value in chapel programs and want to participate in them.

Biological Course Inspires Ideas for Long Awaited Vacation

Jennie Tyler, a junior at The University of Kansas, was inspired by a biology course to plan a trip to Africa. "I love animals," she said. "I want to see them in their natural habitat." The course included a trip to Africa, and she is planning to go on a trip of her own.

"I want to see the giraffes and lions in their natural habitat," she explained. "I want to see the beauty of Africa." She is planning to go on a trip to Africa with her family this summer.
