Daughter Of GSCW President Speaks To English Rotary
A Georgia girl's speech before an English Rotary Club was the subject of a recent doublecolumn feature story in the Atlanta Journal, England, newspaper. Miss Ann Wells, a student at the University of North Carolina, was reported on March 11: Miss Wells has a large number of friends in England and for years people blessed the fact that she was not a man with a large number of friends and said that too much political power. Everyone, said Miss Wells, was-handicapped; politically, she said it was inconsiderate; and socially, they considered it unfair and fallacious.

The Georgia girl, then, a self-declared newspaper woman, stated that the South is a frontier, that there are new industries, new crops, important developments of natural resources. She joined to prevent legislation through the enemy, as some of social and political reforms also talked about.

Miss Wells, whose father is president of the Georgia House of Representatives, had been in England for Women here, is a graduate of the University of North Carolina—having received her bachelor's degree from both institutions in the same week, and was awarded a major in A.M. in absentia from Radcliffe College. Casually she met Miss Wells in England on a Paul Harkway trip. England was administered by the Rotary Foundation, and Miss Wells was given a trip to many Rotary Clubs throughout England, which was spotted on a BBC broadcast.

tHE B5G GOOD TO KNOW YOU!

Song by Polly Shannan

Each time we have been put into our time with The Colonade. This is our one issue that I can say I was one of the editors. "We can't put out another one." This time the issue I think I would like to say I am of the library and it has been hard now that my time at the library all I can say is "yes." I have many places to go and come across women with people that I feel I would have missed it at our college in a sense. It is important to find the right people in the right place and get the job done.

In limited issues it is hard to cover in every woman of people who are often too old or else in too many issues. I have tried in the past to unite different organizations and groups on the one issue of the year, but I still find it hard to get the right people to the right place. I hope that the staff will find the people who are interested in working with us.

With respect, I am looking forward to starting a new term by the end of the month, and I am grateful for the support given by our friends and colleagues. I am happy to have GSCW here for the first time. I have lived here. I want to live for all the little things that have meant so much to me, but these will never come.

Graduate Courses Due At GSCW

(The Monroe Telegram)

The Board of Regents of the University System has approved a proposal to add two new graduate courses at GSCW for the college's fall semester.

One course, titled "Advanced Psychology", will be offered tomorrow at GSCW, and the other, "Introduction to Computer Science", will be taught at the college this fall.

Your proposed courses will be offered to students interested in the field of psychology and computer science. The courses will be taught by Dr. John Smith and Dr. Mary Johnson, respectively.

Don't miss this opportunity to gain valuable knowledge in these important fields of study.

Dear Mr. Editor,

There has been a growing trend in the direction of graduate courses being added to GSCW's curriculum. This is a positive move for the college and its students.

From what I understand, the College of Business Administration is planning to add a new course in management this fall, focusing on leadership and decision-making. This will be a great addition to the college's offerings, providing students with valuable skills they can apply in their future careers.

I am excited to see how this new course will complement the existing courses and help prepare students for success in the business world.

Sincerely,

Edward Smith

University Travel Announces
1951 Teacher-Student Program

The Globe-Trotting University of Travel and Study, Inc., announces its 1951 summer season of diversified study programs for teachers and students in the general fields of Humanities, Economics, and Sociology, Political Science, and the Vocational Arts.

These programs directed by outstanding American educators and experts in special fields will be presented at famous European institutions of Higher Learning such as the Universities of London and Oxford, in England; the Sorbonne, Montpellier and Grenoble, in France; Correlica, Lisbon, Belgrade, and Madrid in Portugal and Spain; Rome and Perugia in Italy; Upsala, Stockholm and Copenhagen in the Scandinavian countries, Jerusalem, Athens and others.

Nations between Travel and Study and the academic services of these institutions have been successfully concluded for the presentation of certificates or special diplomas to all students upon satisfactory completion of the designated summer courses. Teachers may obtain in-service credit. Academic credit will also be granted to interested students who fulfill the requirements of American Colleges and Universities.

In addition, this year’s study program contemplates the organization of small group of teachers or students or both, of 4, 8, or persons who will travel on completely novel tours in private automobiles and cars of well-known American and European makes. Each group will have an instructor a European student specially chosen for his knowledge of the countries to be visited, their languages, peoples, customs, history, and more particularly, whose major field of interest will coincide with that of the group in his area.

The 1951 programs embrace a wide range of subjects. Courses in the Humanities include American, Romanesque Languages, and Latin Mediterranean Culture, Literary England, Art and Architecture, Music, Ballet and Dramatic Art. The Political and Social Sciences series will feature such courses as Political and Economic Institutions, International, Comparative Education, Social Service Administration and Social Psychology. Highlights in the Vocational Arts Curriculum are the European Fashion Tour, practical courses in Ceramics, Ceramics, Typewriting, Hand Weaving, and Photography.

Of special interest to American educators will be the series of seminars and round table discussions on the procedure and problems of Modern Education and the theory and practice of current events teaching in both Europe and the United States.

Arrangements have also been completed for a Round-the-World Cruise on a passenger-cruise leaving in the latter part of June and arriving back in New York City in September. In addition there will be an Archæology and Comparative Religions Tour to Italy, Greece, Turkey, and Israel and including France, Holland and England.

Besides the formal syllabus of lectures and seminars there will be visits to the theatres, opera, concerts and ballet in the major cities to be visited. The 20th Anniversary of Paris — that second home of American educators will prove an ever sharper focus than usual for the French genius for display, fantasy and gayety. The Festival of British Ballet celebrates 27 different individual festivities, including special shows and celebrations in almost every village, hamlet and country town. The Wayne Opera Festival which this year is being put on at Buxton for the first time since 1936 is included in most of the programs.

For the first time the provisions of unlimited mileage will permit groups to decide on their own itinerary while travelling. Alternatively, a complete program, both academic and recreational, will be mapped out in advance. Further information and a brochure setting forth the detailed programs and guarantees of the "Globe-Trotting University" may be obtained from Travel and Study, Inc., 173 West 43rd Street, New York 36, N. Y.
