A New Approach

In response to an occurrence which has recently taken place on campus, this is a plan for a new approach in the prevention of the Honor Code. As stated in the Handbook, there is the line that 'the Honor Code means the personal responsibility to report one's self for violations of any rule of the Association and also for any rule of the Association against others.' To call violations of the Honor Code violations, not only for yourself, but for all others to report them to the proper authorities and to help prevent this from happening.

This sounds like a cool responsibility, but it is not. The Honor Code means that people are responsible for reporting any violations of any rule of the Association and also for all others to report the violation. If you violate this rule, you may be held responsible for reporting it to the proper authorities.

The Honor Code is as clear as ever in this case, and it is not. The Honor Code means that people are responsible for reporting any violations of any rule of the Association and also for all others to report the violation. If you violate this rule, you may be held responsible for reporting it to the proper authorities.

Swan Song

An article has been written on campus about the recent death of a student. The article is written by a friend who was very close to the student and who has known him for many years. The article talks about the student's life and his contributions to the community. The friend expresses his grief and his love for the student.

Swan Song is a collection of essays about the recent death of a student. The essays are written by friends and classmates of the student. The essays are about the student's life and his contributions to the community. The essays express grief and love for the student.

Start Your Petitions

For Ban Changes

For the petition to be signed, please consider the following:

- It is important to gather signatures from students who have been affected by the changes. You can do this by distributing the petition on campus and at events.
- Make sure to include a reason why you think the changes are unfair or inappropriate.
- Consider including a call-to-action or a suggested solution.
- Keep track of the number of signatures collected and share progress updates.

Avenue of 'Allison's House' Pronounced
Success by Critics

A last-minute replacement and opening night a day late did not dampen the brilliant success of College Theatre's first annual production "Avenue of 'Allison's House'." The play was given in the Alumnae House on February 23rd, and received enthusiastic reviews from both the audience and the critics.

"Thank you, Mrs. Allison," said one critic, "for being such a wonderful hostess. The food was delicious, and the atmosphere was perfect."
