New Tradition Evolves In Form of Assembly For High School Girls The recent annual High School Girl's Assembly took place not in historic tentadora, but on the steps of the Student Union. The activities began early in registration, which was followed by a brief program given by the band in Russell Auditorium. There followed an address by Mrs. Wilma Franke Dutton, author and teacher, who spoke on "The Informal Essay," which officially opened the assembly. Soon did Russell's restful setting settle back into the happy laughter and applause brought on by Mrs. Dutton's address, then the tennis courts' blue hues were lit to more than capacity. The attraction here was the demonstration given by the G.M.C. Drill Team and it was seen followed by an influential dance in Atkins Rec Hall. There dancing was smooth, and donuts were ready for the barbecue picnic ahead. Activities were resumed again at the dance, but not before the audience settled back into the theme of college and high school scenes. The first day ended with a close with piano music following by tapes in dormitory lounges. Saturday's activities opened in Peabody Auditorium with the niece of speakers on "The Georgia Girl of 1885" in which some of the giants took place. Remarkable ability was displayed by these girls as they played their unremembered roles. The drama on the scenes consisted of a panel and cleared up a lot of their difficulties. For the rest of the morning and early afternoon the panels were free to the climax and to become further acquainted with Fall students. At the Welcoming Tea in the Miller House next month a group of the faculty and students were awarded by the Montclair Singers, Play Fight, with the Penny Parker and the little folk. The annual concert of Golden Strings of New York gave them a listening introduction to music of Fall activities and brought to a close the assembly. Sunday morning found the band having a great time playing for the boarding students for the dawn of the Fall.\n\nBy Sunny Lehigh\n\n"I used to say she didn't give me at least once, no matter how shocked I was," Nicholas says in George Beiswanger's most notable comedy, "The Late Miss Pitts," and he's varied in his affection for the Colonnade's classic of abstract art.\n\nSome of his other felicities include playing bridge, listening to music and playing the piano, reading the news, and making the movies. He holds the key to his success in this career: "My approach is to see things as long as I can," he says.\n\nAnd he has a secret weapon in his arsenal: his wife, Georgia Beiswanger, a fellow student at the Colonnade.\n\nIn 1968, Dr. B. reorganized his position of Dean of Instruction at Montclair College in Illinois for the first time in history and received an outstanding Administrator of the Year Award. He was one of the first people to handle issues such as title IX (men's and women's) and to develop a broad program to help all students succeed. His work has been recognized by the American Association of University Women, the National Women's History Project, and the National Organization for Women.\n\nDr. Beiswanger is a member of the Colonnade, and he has been a member of the Colonnade for nearly 50 years. He has also written several articles on the history of the Colonnade. In 1982, he was awarded the Colonnade's Distinguished Service Award.\n\nDr. George Beiswanger\n\nAbstract Art—The Tale That Blinds Feature Prof. George Beiswanger

On Holiday Conventions

Last spring quarter the student body voted to allow the Basket Girls' Auxiliary Convention to use their facilities. As a result B. G. A. was able to have a meeting place for their group of interested women. The convention consists of the group and ten delegates totaling the number of members of the group. The convention has been meeting at B. G. A. in the past. The group has been working hard to make sure that everyone enjoys the event. They have planned several activities, including a dance, a fashion show, and a talent show. The convention is open to all members of the group and is free to attend.

Y's Owl

YWCA held its session at Lake Laurel Friday and Saturday, March 6 and 7. Dr. Nelson was the after-dinner speaker Friday night, after her speech Betty Sourcing, Miss. vice-president, and Marian "Lilly" Rozumienie took charge of business and discussion.

Dr. Kremer and Dr. Vincent spoke from the floor with the discussion being opened, and Dr. Nelson made a wonderful after-dinner talk.

Saturday morning, the Christian Philanthropic Convention was discussed, and reports were given by the committees: chairman: Sally Fugger, Vesper; Bett Lemitt, Bible Study; Glenda Brown; Tape; and Miss Jane, Chaplain, Chaplain. There was a social break and more reports given by Kim Turner, Speakers and Institutions; Mary Linford, Nurrect Service; Lucy Gay, Current Affairs; Betty Virginia, Foreign Student Committee; and Sally Howell, WSSP and Intercollegiate. After lunch Dr. Nelson again, the meeting was adjourned and everyone came back with happy faces from sitting too long in the sun.

When the time to speak came, Dr. E. Kline was called upon. He was engaged in discussion, and Dr. Nelson raised her hand to state her views on the subject.

Dr. E. Kline spoke on the subject of "The Christian Faith and the World Today." He pointed out the importance of faith in the modern world and the need for Christians to stand firm in their beliefs.

In conclusion, Dr. E. Kline expressed his hope for the future of Christianity and the role it will play in the world.
