and study the example of those pure hearts, as they speak and live. And if you are neither one of those pure hearted souls, you will find them instructive. If you are already at one, you will find them instructive again. If you are neither, you will find them instructive. If you are both, you will find them instructive again.

And you will be rewarded, along with all of us, for any effort, even though you will meet probably be drawn into several clubs and committees, and if you happen to be able to do any three other wise, never may harm white go to do. If you are in a leadership position, you will find it exhilaratingly hard to get things accomplished. So much red tape gets in the way that you may get discouraged and just skip it. But then again, you may bypass college government's small and wary steps and make your own path to unexplored territory. There are a lot of other things I'd like to tell you, but I'd like even better for you to see them for yourself. Just one more thing, and this is most urgently, do visit the library every minute you use it. It's so comforting.
