The Pause That Almost Refreshes

by Jocie Bridges, Editor

How short spring quarters are in well as progress, the term seems right for it. Perhaps as an indication that summer is near and we are nearer graduation than usual. In the past, these spring quarters seem to have lasted much longer than other quarters, and we are beginning to wonder if we are not going to have to wait for May before we can consider the academic year over. We wonder if this is a sign of things to come, or if some new program is about to be introduced. We hope not.

The psychology behind such an uneasiness is hard to trace. One can only speculate on the reasons why the spring quarter is considered a quarter of stress and anxiety. Perhaps it is because we are closer to graduation, and the pressure of finding jobs and planning for the future is more pronounced. Whatever the reason, it is important to remember that the spring quarter does not have to be a time of stress. It is possible to enjoy the last few months of school and to look forward to the end of the academic year with confidence.

In Praise Of Sat. Classes

A few days ago, as we were walking to class, we heard the familiar sound of the SAT preparation course. As we approached the entrance, we saw that the test was taking place. As we entered, we were greeted by the cheerful faces of the students and teachers. We were surprised at how many students were actually there. We had always thought of the SAT as a test for those who were interested in continuing their education. However, we were pleased to see that there were students who were prepared to take the test seriously. We were inspired by their determination and we left the test with a renewed sense of purpose.

Now that spring quarter is in full swing, we can see the benefits of taking SAT classes. The students are more prepared and the teachers are more engaged. We hope that we can continue to learn and grow throughout the quarter, and that we can continue to enjoy the process of learning.

Welcome back to a campus touched with the magic word of Spring. Rec has many exciting plans for this quarter and we hope you will take advantage of them as often as possible.

When Rec met for retreat last quarter, many old activities were discussed and improvements suggested, and definite ideas for new activities were formulated. One possible suggestion was the development of some inactive sports for those students not particularly interested in such activities as softball. One of the first ways to realize this project would be through bridge tournaments. Also Rec is planning a Playday to be held on our campus this spring quarter. Several other colleges will be invited to participate. Rec hopes to get more films, playdays, and soirees this quarter.

There was also discussion on improving Lake Laurel and using it more. The idea of overnighting at Lake Laurel will become a reality on May 7 and when the three campus organizations join to sponsor an overnight, this trip will be open to anyone.

With a fun and competition of softball intramurals begin Wednesday, April 7. They meet every Monday and Wednesday at 4:15 on the Hockey Field. The name will be color team, instead of dorm or class teams.

Because of student interest in the Penguin Club and swimming class, Rec is offering a swimming class every Tuesday and Thursday at 4:15 in the gym pool. Miss Donahue is the instructor and Penguin members will be assisting.

"A" and "B" Tennis Clubs, which meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4:15, have set April 6 as the deadline for new members. To join "A" Club an interested student must pass a rather strict test. The requirement for "B" club is to have had a tennis course at WC and be taking one now.

Rec is constantly trying to improve the activities it offers to the students. We invite you to make suggestions and to participate in these that interest you.
