Progress is essential—and to meet the necessary progress of the world today we must channel our thoughts to preparations.

A whole new world awaits. A world that must be sought by each person individually to fit their own ideas. Just as Georgia College has unfolded new ideas only you the student can challenge. Challenge is the key word for progress.

In the days to come you will seek and sort out the many phases that Georgia College has to offer. Whether pro or con decide what your ideas are. Complexity and confusion will dominate much of the new road ahead but reward and satisfaction await.

Your own decisions now mark the way. The high school you left was the foundation and now you and only you decide the course which fits your needs. Each decision may not be monumental but just one more preparation toward your personal progress.
Message To The Students From
The President of Georgia College

It is always a pleasure to begin a new term with a new curriculum and new programs that will broaden the educational opportunities for our students. The College will be offering a number of new courses and programs during the fall term that will provide students with a wide range of options from which to choose. We encourage all students to take advantage of these opportunities to enhance their academic and personal growth.

The College is committed to providing a quality education that prepares students for success in their chosen fields. We are proud of our faculty and staff, who are dedicated to providing the best possible educational experience for our students. We are also grateful for the support of our alumni and friends, who continue to make valuable contributions to the College.

We look forward to an exciting and successful year at Georgia College. Thank you for being a part of our community.

Welcome
The present Georgia College Colonnade staff would like this opportunity to extend a warm welcome to all of you. As you enter Georgia College campus, look for the red brick buildings on your right. These buildings house the Administration Building, Fine Arts Building, Library, and other important departments. As you walk through the campus, you will notice that the buildings are arranged in a symmetrical pattern, creating a sense of order and beauty.

A Welcome Of Communications. Again, I have observed in this publication that there has been a great need for better communications on the Georgia College campus. Since the main purpose of a college newspaper is to inform the students about the colleges and activities, I feel that the role of a college newspaper is crucial. As an editor, I want to ensure that the Colonnade meets the needs of the students.

Workmen Busy Repairing For Fall Quarter At G.C.

Few signs escaped the impression of the sudden activity as did that of a college campus between quarters.

Instead of the hustle and bustle of students hurrying in and out of classes, lined up at the cafeteria, headed for the library, editorials for the campus paper and notations of a basketball or an afternoon nap awaiting them in the dormitory after a day's classes, there was only empty walkways and seemingly sightless buildings.

To the casual observers the campus almost seemed deserted of life, but the unassuming waiting to be revealed by the arrival of the first quarter for another quarter of work.

Georgia College at Milledgeville's Physical Plant Director, Roswell M. Harkey, and his force of about 50 employees know that nothing could be further from the truth.

For them, these seemingly interrelated were part of the heightened activity and the sprouting back-to-back projects between the summer and fall quarters; they were busier than ever.

Harkey's armament is no less than 17 major projects, ranging from the preparation of new parking space to the conversion of a beautiful old house into an honor dormitory.

Concurrent assemblies of faculty offices, and parking space required to be used by the honor dormitory, alumnus and faculty, and among the items on the priority list was the honor dormitory.

Eighteen junior and senior women will be housed in the dorm, which was previously the home of

Georgia College at Milledgeville

Georgia College at Milledgeville, the newest and most ambitious unit of the University System of Georgia, has undergone a complete evolution during its short history.

At first glance, it is difficult to believe that this college, which now occupies a 500-acre campus, was founded in 1882. In that year, the Georgia General Assembly passed a law establishing a new system of public education. This law provided for the establishment of Normal Schools in the state's rural areas, and the first Georgia Normal School was founded in Milledgeville in 1882.

The Normal School quickly began to attract students from all over Georgia. By 1900, the school had a student body of over 100, and it was clear that this small institution needed to be expanded. In 1902, the Georgia General Assembly passed a law authorizing the establishment of a state teacher's college in Milledgeville.

The new state teacher's college was opened in 1904, and it quickly became one of the state's most important educational institutions. In 1918, the school was renamed Georgia College, and it began to offer a wider range of courses and degrees.

In 1923, the school was moved to its current location on the outskirts of Milledgeville, and it was renamed Georgia College and State University. Today, Georgia College is one of the state's leading public institutions of higher education, offering a wide range of undergraduate and graduate programs.

Georgia College has always been committed to excellence in education, and it has produced thousands of graduates who have gone on to successful careers in a variety of fields. Today, Georgia College continues to be a leader in higher education, and it is proud to be a part of the University System of Georgia.

Who To See?

The heterogeneous nature of an academic community assumes the presence of several groups of people having different functions, needs, and purposes working together in the interest of the community. Although all parts of the community are interconnected and between those parts tend to maintain a stable community, the diversity of opinion, interest, and values proves to be a source of friction and misunderstanding.

The articles of the bill are important, by the same reason on evil in itself, may be an indicator light for the community. It is important to study the problem and to decide what will be the best course of action in order to make the community a better place to live.
Rat Week At Georgia College

Rat: According to Webster, a Rat is a rodent who brown off the name at the root. According to Georgia College a rat is a very friendly and everlast for the betterment of Georgia College. Rats are a very important part of Georgia College and it’s many years of tradition. I’m sure these people sometimes appear to be funny but you’ll grow fond of them and the tradition they represent. No matter what you’ve heard about Rat week or not in these pictures I’ll still do it fun. The main reason to be a Rat is to relax and enjoy life and manage this tradition to participate in student life at Georgia College. Rat week aims to follow the same path as all thousands upon thousands of freshmen before him. He was born from the true reason for you want to have this opportunity to become acquainted with his fellow classmates and to have fun and respect Georgia College and its fine traditions. Here are some helpful hints to help a rat from going crazy during Rat Week.

... 1. Freshmen wear rat caps at all times.
... 2. Freshmen participate in all Freshman functions.
... 3. Freshmen speak to everyone and are courteous to all.
... 4. Freshmen vote in elections in which they are eligible.
... 5. Freshmen attend “all” pep rallies and dances.
... 6. Freshmen learn all college songs and yells.
... 7. Freshmen are honest in the classroom.
... 8. Freshmen respect the principles and regulations of the college.
... 9. Freshmen put their names and home towns on the back of their rat caps.
...10. Freshmen are to show initiative and ambition at all times.
...11. Freshmen are “required” to relax and have fun!
...12. Freshmen always walk tall and stand proud (Note: to freshmen: Clip and save. You need to know the traditions it might come in handy during rat week. For guaranteed results follow the unwritten 13th tradition: “Do as upperclassmen say do not as upperclassmen do”!)

Georgia College's Future In The Making

The structure will be built so that it may serve as either a part of the college or a new educational dormitory. It will be located on the college campus, and will consist of a large, modern building. The center portion will house the administrative offices, while the south wing will be used for classrooms and laboratories. The classrooms and laboratories will be equipped with the latest in educational equipment. The building will also include a large auditorium and a gymnasium.

Georgia College has a long history of excellence in education, and the new facility will continue this tradition. The college has a strong commitment to providing high-quality education and a rigorous curriculum. The new facility will allow for the expansion of programs and the addition of new courses, ensuring that students have access to the latest in educational resources.

In addition to the physical expansion, Georgia College is also committed to improving the student experience. The college is working to create a more inclusive and supportive environment for all students. This includes efforts to increase diversity and promote equity among students, as well as providing support and resources to help students succeed.

Georgia College is committed to ensuring that every student has the opportunity to succeed. The new facility will play a key role in this effort, providing the space and resources needed to support the academic and personal growth of all students.

The Out Look

"Reasonable Optimistic"

That's the way soccer coach Larry Bosserman puts it as he looks at the big picture. The team has shown signs of plateauing, and it is the coach's job to keep it moving. The fall season was a major letdown for Bosserman, who felt the team was ready to break through. The fall season saw the team lose all four games in which they played, and Bosserman was forced to make some changes. However, the team picked up in the spring season and finished the season with a 5-3-1 record.

The team struggled in the fall season, but Bosserman was optimistic about their chances in the spring. He felt that the team was ready to take the next step and that they had the talent to do so. The spring season saw the team win five of their six games, and Bosserman was pleased with their performance.

Bosserman's optimism was based on the team's ability to adapt to new situations. The team played a variety of teams in the fall season, and Bosserman felt that this helped them to improve their skills. The team also played a number of games in which they were down early, and Bosserman felt that this helped them to become more resilient.

The team has a strong core of returning players, and Bosserman is optimistic about their chances in the spring season. He feels that the team has the potential to make a significant improvement in the spring season and that they have the talent to do so.

Coach Larry Bosserman

With the awareness of soccer in many of the country's schools, many coaches are now looking to fill the coaching ranks with college-age men. Larry Bosserman is one of those coaches. Bosserman, a native of Athens, Ga., graduated from the University of Georgia in 1965 with a degree in education. After graduating, he began his coaching career at Lenoir-Rhyne College in North Carolina. In 1969, he was hired as the head coach of the Georgia College soccer team.

Bosserman has been coaching for over 50 years, and he has had success at many levels. He has won numerous championships and has had his team in the NCAA playoffs multiple times. He has also been named the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Coach of the Year multiple times.

Bosserman is a dedicated coach who is always looking for ways to improve his team. He is a firm believer in the value of hard work and dedication, and he expects his players to give their best effort on the field. He also places a strong emphasis on developing his players as people, and he is proud of the way his players have handled themselves both on and off the field.

In the Making

Coach Larry Bosserman

With the increasing number of colleges offering soccer programs, there is a growing need for college soccer coaches. The need for college soccer coaches is driven by the increased popularity of soccer in the United States. Soccer has become a popular sport at the collegiate level, and the demand for college soccer coaches has increased.

In order to address this need, college soccer programs are being established across the country. Many colleges are looking to hire college soccer coaches to fill these positions. These coaches will be responsible for developing and implementing a successful soccer program.

The process of hiring college soccer coaches is complex and requires a thorough understanding of the sport. The process involves identifying the needs of the soccer program, developing a job description, and advertising the position. The position must be advertised to a wide range of potential candidates, including college soccer players, college coaches, and other professionals in the sport.

Once the position is advertised, the college will receive applications from interested candidates. The college will then conduct interviews with these candidates and select the most qualified individual for the position. The selected candidate will then be offered the job, and the college will begin the hiring process.

Colleges are looking to hire college soccer coaches who have the necessary experience and qualifications. These coaches should have extensive knowledge of the sport and a proven track record of success. They should also have the ability to communicate effectively and build strong relationships with players, coaches, and other stakeholders.

Colleges are also looking for coaches who are committed to the development of their athletes. These coaches should be dedicated to helping their athletes reach their full potential and achieving success on the field.

Colleges are looking for coaches who are able to build positive relationships with their athletes. These coaches should be able to build trust and respect with their players and create a positive environment in which they can thrive.
