GC Pageant Saturday

The Old Governor's Mansion on the campus of Georgia College and the Georgia capitol in Athens have been designated National Historic Landmarks by the federal government.

The two buildings are among 17 remaining landmarks to be restored in the state and are expected to be completed in 1980.

On view on the first floor of the mansion is a freshman majoring in Elementary Education. Talent - singing.

Sue Ann Jones - Home town in Atlanta, Georgia. Jones is sponsored by P.R. Delta Theta. She is a junior majoring in Business Education. Talent - unknown.

Kathy Macnaim - Home town in Hamilton, Ohio. She is sponsored by Wells Dairy. Kathy is a freshman majoring in Physical Therapy. Talent - dance comedy.

Mary Ann Simmons - Home town in Milledgeville, Georgia. She is sponsored by GC Black Student Alliance Marilyn's major is in Special Education. Marilyn is a junior majoring in Home Ec. Education. Talent - singing.

Jo Lynn Smith - Home town in Macon. She is sponsored by Student Senate. Major undeclared but is interested in Fashion Marketing. Jo Lynn is a Sophomore. Talent - just dance.

The above names in the glowing smiles of Miss Angle Berry, the reigning Miss Georgia College of 1973. The "Lucky Place" this year will be the Dr. David Starzak of the Georgia College Biology Department. Dr. Starzak will be the Master of Ceremonies for the beauty pageant.

Now that you know a little about the girls, a short word on the people in charge would be in order. Dr. David Starzak, assistant professor in Biology, will be acting as Master of Ceremonies.

Authors: Mr. Turner Farmer and Miss Maxine Wells. A special thanks to Miss Donalda for the long hours she has put into the pageant.

Of course we can't forget the stars of our show, Miss GC 1973, Angle Berry, and Miss GC 1972, Debby Savaugh. Because of space limitations, it is impossible to list all the people who have helped in lighting, stage props, and all other seemingly thankless jobs. For each of you a special thanks from each contestant.

A Word From Harvard

Dr. Joa Mayer, a Harvard University nutritionist who led a technical mission to war-torn Haiti in 1979 for UNICEF, will speak in Chapel Hall at Georgia College on Monday, April 1, at 1:45 p.m.

Dr. Mayer's lecture, free and open to the public, will be the final offering of the Georgia College Lyceum Committee for the academic year.

The Harvard professor will speak on the topic "U.S. Nutrition Policies in the Seventies," the topic also of his latest book.

Dr. Mayer was born in Paris in 1920, the son of a physiologist. He did his undergraduate studies in Paris, receiving a B.Lit. (summa cum laude), a B.Sc. (cum laude) and several of the highest scholastic awards in France, including the First (Horse) Prize of French college. He is a fellow of the Ellis Norrelme Suppliament.

He was awarded 14 decorations, including the Croix de Guerre with two Palmes, Gold and Bronze Stars, the Resistance Medal and the Cross of Knight of the Legion of Honor.

After World War II, he resumed his student at Yale, where he was awarded a Ph. D. in physiological chemistry in 1946 and the Sorbonne where he was awarded a 5-cie in physiology auducation in 1956. He has since been awarded an honorary M.A. from Harvard and M.D. from the College of Physicians of Chesterhake.

In 1954, Dr. Mayer joined the Harvard faculty where he is now professor of nutrition, lecturer on the history of public health, and member of the Center for Population Studies.

Dr. Mayer follows his research on the mechanization of nutrition in the United States and volunteers in the psychological needs of the developing world. He has published approximately 550 papers and several books. The latest include "Overweight Casualties, Cost and Central," "Human Nutrition," and "U.S. Nutrition Policies in the Seventies."
The Five Day Blah

Every student at the first of every quarter as well as in the faculty here at GC, has a spam to the inevitable process of registering for the next quarter. Contrary, to popular belief, our great age of industrialization does not enhance the quaint old customs of huzting to hell in the lives outside of Parts and the Library. Although the lives were not as long this quarter as they have been in previous quarters, the fact that we still maintain that registration is still a "drag," you drag yourself out of bed, drag yourself over to front campus, drag yourself through the lines, drag yourself to the dorm (or home) to collagen and wait for.

Reports From Washington

It's getting close to that time of the year when students start thinking about how they're going to spend their summer. I hope college students who are residents of the 1st District will consider a Congressional internship among their options for the summer.

In order to provide students with an opportunity to experience government, I'm sponsoring a summer internship for a young summer in a month internship in the 1st District Washington Office. The two internships will run from the 1st of July to the 30th of August. Salary is $300 per month. To be eligible for an internship, an applicant must be a legal resident of the 1st Congressional District of Georgia, have completed one or more academic years of college work by summer and have at least a cumulative C average.

Application forms are available in the President's Office of the 1st District college. Deadline for submitting applications for April 1.

The criteria used in judging applications includes part-time employment, community activities, relevance of the intern experience to applicant's future and academic goal.

Our intern last summer was a student at Augusta State University, a student of Georgia College. As I plan to open the office next month, I'll declare anyone, his summer in Washington was a very valuable learning experience. Not only did participate in the 1st activities in a Congressional office, but he also had the opportunity to hear various major speakers, attend seminars on the legislative process and hear facing Congress today, attend committee hearings and list to debates on the floor of the House and Senate. I hope all students in the 1st District who are eligible will apply for this unique chance to become involved in our nation's government.
