Colonnade April 5, 1974

Follow this and additional works at: http://kb.gcsu.edu/colonnade
Part of the Higher Education Commons, and the Mass Communication Commons

Recommended Citation
http://kb.gcsu.edu/colonnade/704

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by Knowledge Box. It has been accepted for inclusion in Colonnade by an authorized administrator of Knowledge Box.
Jan Foskey Captures Crown
in Miss GC Pageant

An aggregation of lovely ladies was seen Saturday evening as eight hopefuls walked and performed before an admiring audience for the seventh annual Miss Georgia College Pageant. After grueling weeks of preparation and rehearsals and last minute rush jobs, "On Top of the World," under the supervision of Mrs. Herpers Dough and Miss Angie Berry, was ready for production March 30.

The eight contestants during the first week's preparation, although barred, maintained an air of cooperation and cheerfulness. During that time the girls learned how to walk across stage, stand, turn, bevacuated, and most importantly of all, smile. One contestant stated that the learning to smile constantly was the hardest part of the contest. Saturday afternoon was a test-

Prof Included in DAS

Dr. Olivet S. Taylor, chairman of the Department of History and political science at Georgia College, has been selected for inclusion in the story edition of The Directory of American Scholars. The directory contains biographical sketches of scholars who have achieved national or international recognition through research and publication. A specialist in African and Afro-American history, Dr. Taylor is the author of a book and numerous articles and reviews in journals in Africa and the United States.

Mayer Speaks on Nutrition

"Twenty-five million Americans do not have the resources to food themselves properly," said Dr. Jean Mayer, a Harvard nutritionist, recently in a lecture at Georgia College. This despite the fact that 27 million in the U.S. now participate in an improved food stamp program.

Appearing as the final speaker at the Georgia College Laymen's Series, Dr. Mayer included in the "U.S. Nutrition Policies and the Laymen," and discussed the role politics affecting nutrition and poverty, nutrition and health, and nutrition and the consumer. Among the 25 million Americans who do not eat properly because they lack the funds to purchase the proper foods, many of the elderly and most of the poor, Dr. Mayer noted.

"Until the civil rights movement of this nation, the poor had been fairly invisible in the U.S.," said the speaker. "If you didn't want to see them, you didn't have to.

Unlike those in lower income brackets became very sick. They were not old enough to receive any medical attention at all, Dr. Mayer stated, simply because the sick who became malnourished could not afford normal medical care until it was almost mandatory that they be hospitalized. The civil rights movement, he said again and again, was the agent responsible for bringing to the attention of story that there were many stories that were too many of the poor in the U.S. who were malnourished, hungry, and unable to food themselves.

Concerning senior citizens in our society, Dr. Mayer remarked, "The U.S. has always been a hard country for the elderly" and cited as one reason the million nature of many Americans who often have their parents in need for themselves.

Another reason, he mentioned, was the fact that there are many social policies systems in the U.S. which force employees to stay with a company or lose all pension rights only to have companies sometimes go on bankruptcies and have employees see those rights disappear with the firm.

Dr. Mayer stated that the present school lunch program, an improved version of an older program, had now been extended to nine million children (three million) but that another seven million children needed to be fed by the program. He also called for a greater emphasis on feeding of name-youngsters during the months when schools were not in session and for an increase in the "march on wheels" or free meal programs for the elderly who are not able to afford higher food prices.

The speaker, who directed the White House Conference on Food, Nutrition, and Health, said that food programs for the elderly were much more humane and made much more sense economically as well as better for the consumer.

In that connection, Dr. Mayer said that 68 billion had been spent on health services (hospital expenses, hospitalization, those in the medical profession, and medicine and drugs) since 1970, even so that every expenditure of money had not increased the life expectancy of the average person by more than a month over the past three years.

The Harvard educator pointed out that the U.S. had dropped positions on the world in life expectancy for males of 39 in the past 20 years. In 1890, the U.S. ranked 10th among the nations of the world in male life expectancy. In 1940, it ranked 10. The nation ranked 20th in 1950 in life expectancy for women. In the area of nutrition and health, Dr. Mayer said that Americans consume three times as much protein as they need, that three billion dollars were spent last year on advertising by the food industry (cost of a foot of lawn), and that today's mothers are "being blackmailed by a combination of chemicals and by supermarkets that put foods of little nutritional value (supercounsel creams, etc.) in lower shelves for appealing to dump into the market basket.

Looking into the future, Dr. Mayer stated that the present right situation in the nation's food supply could be made worse by an expected drought in 1975 which drought have appeared on the average of every 20 years in the U.S. and that a world-wide drought could have a catastrophic effect on the world's food supply.

Stocks in the U.S. are at the lowest level since 1969, explained, while the world's population has doubled since that year.

The Harvard professor predicted that Americans would be eating more tinned foods in the future — those with mixes that are canned and — and foods with lower fat content.

He also stated that the U.S. government must take a greater lead in insisting on standards of nutrition, nutritional labeling, unit pricing, and upon dating — measures that would help a customer know what he is buying.

"There is absolutely no panic in touching触摸 any high schools and colleges unless that teaching can be translated into a language known to the customer," he finished.

Photos Shown at GC Library

David Payne, a public relations specialist and photographer at Central Broadcasting, showed here beside one of his black and white photographs to be exhibited in the Bar Dillard Russell Library at Georgia College from April 7 through April 30. A 1972 graduate of GC, worked for the Je De Jubel Photography Studio and WCWB-TV in Macon before joining the CHW information staff and was editor of the college yearbook, The Spectrum.

Especially for those in the back row of the audience, the program included the presentation of the sonnet "Easter, 1943" by W. H. Auden. Simply put, the sonnet is about how love conquers all — even death. It is a way to explain the meaning of love for a time period.

Especially for those in the back row of the audience, the program included the presentation of the sonnet "Easter, 1943" by W. H. Auden. Simply put, the sonnet is about how love conquers all — even death. It is a way to explain the meaning of love for a time period.

It's Your Right to Know

April 5, 1974

Georgia College, Milledgeville, Ga.

Volume 57 Issue 19

The Colononna'd
Dear Editor

Recently, a large number of students in the Student Union have been discussing the possibility of forming a new student organization. The purpose of this organization would be to promote and enhance the quality of life on campus. The recent increase in student activism has brought attention to various issues, and the Student Union is considering ways to better serve the needs of its members.

Sincerely,
Tina Thompson
President,
Student Union

The Colonnade

How To Succeed.

By Robert Coleman

Tickets went on sale Monday, April 1, for the Georgia College Student Government's annual spring musical, "How To Succeed." The show, which is directed by Professor Robert Coleman of the School of Business Administration, will be performed in the Student Union Auditorium on April 5 and 6. It is directed by Professor Robert Coleman of the School of Business Administration, who is also a member of the faculty at Georgia College.

Tireless in her efforts to bring the show to life, Professor Coleman has been working hard to ensure a successful production. She has been involved in all aspects of the show, from selecting the cast to writing the script. Professor Coleman's passion for the arts and her dedication to the Georgia College community are evident in her work on this project.

Sports

February 28, 1978

The basketball season has ended, and the Georgia College basketball team has wrapped up another successful season. The team worked hard throughout the season, and their efforts paid off with a strong performance.

The basketball season has ended, and the Georgia College basketball team has wrapped up another successful season. The team worked hard throughout the season, and their efforts paid off with a strong performance.

The basketball season has ended, and the Georgia College basketball team has wrapped up another successful season. The team worked hard throughout the season, and their efforts paid off with a strong performance.

The basketball season has ended, and the Georgia College basketball team has wrapped up another successful season. The team worked hard throughout the season, and their efforts paid off with a strong performance.

The basketball season has ended, and the Georgia College basketball team has wrapped up another successful season. The team worked hard throughout the season, and their efforts paid off with a strong performance.
Jan Foskey, Miss GC 1974
Phi Sigma Sigma

Frank Howell

Newly, 36 new members were initiated into the Phi Sigma Sigma Sorority Alpha Delta Chapter. The qualifications for membership were: one year's membership, two semesters in residence, four credits in the major, and a 3.0 grade point average.

Seniors

A new occupant will be moving into the newly vacated dormitory room of the Phi Sigma Sigma Sorority. The new occupant will be a member of the Alpha Delta Chapter.

Senate Notebook

There is a number of Senate positions open in this election, and the Senate is in need of new members. Interested students are encouraged to apply before the deadline.

Job Postings

As of July 1st, the University of Georgia is seeking a new Head Cheerleader. The ideal candidate will have a strong track record of excellence and be able to lead the team to victory against all comers.

Chauffeur Services

Chauffeur services are available for a nominal fee. Services include transportation to and from the airport, medical appointments, and other important events.

The Colonade

Greek Take Independents

Thursday March 21, the Georgia College Greek Development Council sponsored an all-day basketball game between the Georgia College Greeks and the Independent. The purpose of the event was to raise funds for the Georgia College Development Council. The international game was played all day, with the game continuing on until midnight. Throughout the day, all the money raised was donated to the Georgia College Development Council.

Organism

SPEAKERS

Organism is an all-male, a cappella group that performs a variety of musical styles, including jazz, rock, and traditional. The group is open to all interested students and meets every Thursday at 7:30 PM in the Forum.

Statewide Intramurals

The Georgia College Intramural Program is seeking volunteers to help in its first year of running the program. Volunteers are needed to assist with the organization and execution of the program.

Summer Work Experience

Opportunities for summer work experience are available in a variety of industries, including finance, technology, and healthcare. Interested students are encouraged to apply.

NFL Week Success

A fall lineup of special events were planned at Georgia College for the first time in years. The events included an all-sports newsletter, a movie night, and a fall festival.

O'Connor Discusses

More than 500 people attended the 10th Annual Georgia College Football Fan Fest to celebrate the team's recent success. The event included a tailgate party, a pep rally, and a game day celebration.

Milledgeville

Midnight

An article appeared in the Georgia College Midnight, discussing the future of the college and its potential to expand.

Mongolid

An article appeared in the Mongolid, discussing the future of the college and its potential to expand.

Cancer Walk-athon

The Cancer Walk-athon, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, was held on the campus of Georgia College. The event included a 5K run and a 10K walk.

Cancer-Free

A cancer-free message is displayed on the college's digital screens, reminding students and faculty of the importance of healthy living and the fight against cancer.

American Cancer Society

The American Cancer Society is hosting a series of events to raise awareness about cancer prevention and treatment. The events include a talk by a cancer survivor, a panel discussion, and a yoga class.
Tarzan In Milledgeville

The other day, to my surprise, I discovered our freest of Milledgeville are just as human in the rest of us. They have a sense of humor, and the desire to be "huma." I was leaving GC's Nursery School Wednesday morning when I heard a blood curdling cry that sounded much like the yell of Tarzan. Yes! Turning in the direction, my eyes focused upon a man in blue standing atop the fire station on the roof. Once again the main call was heard. A little on the airspace side, but basically the point.

My curiosity was aroused to no end. Why was the man on the roof? And why the Tarzan routine? Continuing to "case" the situation, my questions were soon answered. The fireman was removing fallen limbs from the wind storm the night before. Several other

I discovered our freest of Milledgeville are just as human in the rest of us. They have a sense of humor, and the desire to be "huma." I was leaving GC's Nursery School Wednesday morning when I heard a blood curdling cry that sounded much like the yell of Tarzan. Yes! Turning in the direction, my eyes focused upon a man in blue standing atop the fire station on the roof. Once again the main call was heard. A little on the airspace side, but basically the point.

My curiosity was aroused to no end. Why was the man on the roof? And why the Tarzan routine? Continuing to "case" the situation, my questions were soon answered. The fireman was removing fallen limbs from the wind storm the night before. Several other

Mrs. Renee Elbridge, director of nursing services at Colsum Park Hospital in Macon, was the guest speaker at a recent gathering of student nurses at the Georgia College Department of Nursing education's class of '73. The ceremony was at the First United Methodist Church. Mrs. Elbridge spoke on "A Nurse's Commitment to the Nursing Profession."

The invocation was given by Rev. Norman L. Waldup, pastor of the Moodyville Baptist Church and greetings were extended by Dean William Simpson of Georgia College.

Seventy students are members of the class of '73, with all being on hand for the Napoleon ceremony. Miss Catherine Summerville, director of the department of nursing education, assisted by Mrs. Mary R. Cook and Mrs. Wendy Grauer of the department, cupped the students.

New Courses Come To GC

Twist Hits Hall

"Shake It Up Baby"

by John Williamson

Recently Napoleon Dormitory of Georgia College was the scene for a full hop. The "sack hop" was given by Larry Duke, President of the Hall. Residents of the dorm were asked to dress in the style of the '50's and '60's. I believe that several of the residents had the nerve, gumption, and the sense of humor to dress in this popular style.

Things really started hopping when a dance contest was held. At the "Hop" was played for the center and no couples were selected by appetize to participate in this contest. Linda Mitchell Freeman and Denise Edwards pictured above won the grand prize.

Refreshments consisting of popcorn, various sweet cookies and crackers, potato chips and other delicacies were served. John Williamson served as Master of Ceremonies for the hop. Napoleon Dorm is the sole dormitory known to the Colsum Park staff, to have social functions or parties of this nature so far this year.

A big "Thank You" to Mrs. Adams, House Director, for preparing and assisting with the refreshments and dance. Thanks again to Mrs. Adams, for a job well done by all.

ACM

On the other hand, by offering highly specialized programs to non-state students at in-state rates, participating institutions will increase enrollments in such "noncommon" programs which, in many cases, have the capacity for additional students.

Dr. Revonado compares the arrangement to that of the airlines industry, which for years has offered tickets on a standby basis at a reduced rate to fill flights.

As a result of the Commons Market, additional education opportunities will be available to many students, and existing programs in the Southern region will be made more efficiency available - all in a savings to the student, institutions and taxpayer.

Posters are set to appear on campus, which will indicate the names of state coordinators, who will distribute additional information on program procedures. Additional information is now available from the Free Press and the United States in Parks Hall at GC.