President Bunting Welcomes New Students

It's a personal pleasure for me to welcome both new and returning students to the Georgia College campus. For the next few weeks this will be an extremely busy time with orientation programs for students and faculty, for registration and placement examinations, and for the official beginning of classes. However, I can assure you that we shall all survive them. Georgia College will be a better institution because of them.

I sincerely hope that all new students (treatment and transfers) will endeavor to strive to attain the opportunities that we believe exist here. Georgia College has been recognized over the years as a quality institution with academic programs of excellence. During the past several years we have added over twenty new programs, graduate and under-graduate, to provide the type of education that is essential for satisfaction and success in the world of today and tomorrow. Please be certain that you know of these opportunities for your own personal self-development.

This College has always been considered a "Friendly Campus". Let us work together to continue this reputation in fact. Be as helpful as you can to newcomers and make it a point to know and respect each other. You will find student leaders, faculty, and administration ready and eager to help you with any problem that you may have.

GC Receives Grants

Library—

Georgia College and the Central Georgia Association of Libraries have recently received two grants, each in the amount of $6,855, to purchase various types of library materials. The two grants were made by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's Office of Education through a college library resources program.

GC will use the grant to support graduate programs on campus, primarily through the purchase of all types of print and non-print materials. Charles E. Beard, director of libraries at GC, announced.

Bear, project officer for the association's grant, indicated that the consortium would use its grant money to purchase commercially-recorded audio cassette tapes in needed subject areas and to purchase blank cassette tapes for use by the various association members to copy tapes already in existence at the different institutions.

Members of the Central Georgia Association of Libraries are Emanuel Junior College in Beaumont, Fort Valley State College in Fort Valley, Middle Georgia College in Cochran, Gordon Junior College in Statesboro, Telfair College in Perry, Georgia College and Georgia Military College in Milledgeville, The Pict River Regional Library in Griffin, the Ocmulgee Regional Library in Bainbridge, and the Middle Georgia Regional Library, Macon Junior College, Wabianya College, and Mercer University, all in Macon.

Nursing—

An award of nearly $9,000 has been made to Georgia College by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's nursing education grant program, according to Dr. J. Whitney Bunting, college president.

The grant, totaling $7,875, will be used by the GC nursing education department and administered by Catherine Summerville, department director.

Culpitation grant funds as a rule may be spent for any purpose which the receiving institution of higher learning judges will most effectively advance its educational program.

Specifically the money will be used at GC to provide in-service or other type of training that will increase the skills of licensed vocational or licensed practical nurses, nursing assistants and aides, and other para-professional nursing personnel.

In essence, the grant will help to alleviate the current shortage of nurses and to upgrade the skills of those already in the nursing profession.

The nursing education grant program, administered by the Bureau of Health Manpower Education's division of nursing at the National Institute of Health, replaces a program of institutional grants previously authorized by the Health Manpower Act of 1968. The capitalization program was authorized by the Nurse Training Act of 1972.

This is the third such grant to be received by GC. In 1972, the college nursing education department was given a grant of $5,625. Last year, GC received $10,572 in grant money.

Biology—

An award of $1,117.96, the last of a four-part grant from the Ecological Foundation, Inc. of Macon, has been received by Georgia College, according to Dr. David Cooper, chairman of the GC biology department.

The amount represents the last distribution of the assets of the foundation established by Edward Cramton and managed by Edward G. Cragin.

The $1,117.96 is the fourth unrestricted grant made to the biology department for ecological research since 1972. Previous grants have been for $1,500, $4,000 and $900, which with the present grant, have provided a total of $5,117.96 in ecological research at the college.

The funds have been transferred to the Center for Environmental Study and Planning at GC.

A love story that begins with an incredible experiment!

Write-up of a student's experience attending a regular weekly meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous, observing play activities of children in a nursery school, and visiting drug addicts at Central State Hospital. It is part of the regular daily classroom activities of a course entitled "Personality and Adjustment" at Georgia College by Hugh W. Clock, assistant professor of psychology.

"In a college course such as this we generally discuss such topics as conflicts, defense mechanisms, emotional trauma, and so forth. For instance, the theme of this week was "frustration and how many other such topics," Clock noted, "but it is difficult for many young people to make a connection between these".

Field trip to the Georgia College nursery school, to a weekly meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous, to a drug and alcohol ward at Central State Hospital, and to the Moore Theatre in Milledgeville are on the regular agenda for the class which will meet four times a week. The students are always among the most popular of the field trips.

"The biggest adjustment that a person has to make in life is adjusting to his own death," Clock said. "It usually comes as a shock to most people that death will actually touch them, too."

Interview of the student who is writing this article at an early age and not completely aware of many new and quite different adjustments he is going through. This interview is about the personal growth of a student who has been diagnosed with a terminal illness.

"Adjustment is a continuous process. We just keep developing as an an age, and growing older from that stage of early development. Each stage of life requires many new and quite different adjustments," he pointed out.

"Look at any stage of man's life. The baby in the family, the young child, the adolescent, the young adult, those three years just past middle age, middle age itself, the years leading to middle age, retirement, middle age, old age, and finally death. The person who tries to remain rigid and unchanging through all these stages will have much difficulty in accepting his own role in living a happy and productive life."
